

Life [Rev. 20180911]

By J — Latest revision: <http://allis.foundation/Life.pdf>

ABOVE: "STANDARDS" COMIC BY XKCD — 'IDEA OF A SIMPLE, ORIGINAL CONCEPT THAT BECOMES COMPLICATED APPLICATION IN LIFE' *1

The Birth of the Archons

The few pages [photographed from Christ Consciousness by Norman Paulsen] posted [next four pages] give us important insights into the unintentional birth of the mental parasite that is the Archon infection. It is important to realize that consciousness is the key to creation on every level of existence. And, we need to understand that the small group of radiant beings that intentionally ventured into the forbidden zone were creative gods of the Cosmos. At that time they were working peacefully together. They were "Builders of Worlds" which included our Earth/Gaia.

As we read the pages below, it is clear that a small group of our space-faring ancestors were traumatized to the core of their being when they intentionally entered a "forbidden zone" located somewhere in our Universe. As a result, our ancestors unintentionally created the parasitic, negative thought forms that we on earth call Archon or Lord... among other names, such as demons, etc.

I used to think that these parasitic entities were external or alien to our Universe. However, after researching and analyzing this topic intently for decades, I now realize that these dark entities are a holographic fragment of our multidimensional selves—body/mind/spirit. Therefore, we can and must cure this illness of consciousness ourselves...^{*2} magnetic storm of enormous proportions. The dark clouds of negative energy began to obscure their consciousness and the light of I AM THAT I AM!

These sons and daughters of God were totally unprepared for the negative environment to which they had willingly subjected themselves. Immediately and without warning, in the twilight of their consciousness, they began to experience the energy effects of virtue's opposites. They began to manifest symptoms of jealousy and anger, along with the sense of egotism, which had existed in a dormant state of self consciousness within them. Greed now followed in swift pursuit for the first time in the minds and bodies of the afflicted Builders.

These inquisitive sons and daughters began to investigate virtue's opposites, disregarding the warnings. Instead of immediately trying to remove themselves from the dark recesses of magnetic clouds of negative energy, they went further into them. The Divine Consciousness of these sons and daughters of God became overshadowed by mental images projected from indulgence in non-virtuous thoughts, desires and actions. The Great Central Sun, which had always been visible and shining within their consciousness, became obscured by the orbits of dark thought-forms. They became possessed by the old dormant self-conscious state, now regenerated by a new dark and negative egotism supported by the accumulation of non-virtuous mental images and actions.

Falling deeper into the desires created by non-virtuous thoughts, they finally lost all vision of the body of Christ, the kingdom of heaven. With this great loss of spiritual vision, they were unable to operate their grand celestial mus. Forced to retire them, they became marooned on a world near this turbulent area. While isolated in this negative environment, the dark thought-forms of non-virtuous desires totally overpowered them. Propelled by the forces of desire, the non-virtuous mental images established a center, a nucleus of consciousness around which to orbit. That which had never been conscious moved, and established a dark center of self consciousness within each one of the afflicted beings.

From these centers, the newly born dark forces were able to maintain control over the physical minds and bodies of the fallen sons and daugh-

Divine Consciousness did not create "evil" within the projected images of creation. Evil evolved forth from the free will and the inquisitive acts of highly evolved human angel beings treading where "angels fear to tread."

Birth of the Angels

ters of God. The dark and sinister forces, now fully conscious and moved by great desire, began projecting thought-forms from their centers. They focused on the outer self consciousness of the now possessed sons and daughters of God. The fallen Builders began to feel the urge emanating from within them to conquer and enslave their brothers and sisters. Evil was born in time and space in the minds and bodies of the possessed sons and daughters of God.†

The grand celestial mus, the fire ships of the Builders, were abandoned and replaced by ships powered with atomic and fossil fuels mined and worked from the raw elements of the strange world upon which they found themselves marooned. This possessed group of beings, inspired by the newly-born genius of evil, built a fleet of metal ships and equipped them with awesome atomic weapons. In their atomic and rocket-powered vehicles, they now embarked upon missions of annihilation and total destruction, to conquer their former brothers and sisters, the Builders. The great civilizations they had helped build and maintain for millenniums were now to be annihilated. Their attacks brought total devastation as they stormed the ramparts of the heavenly cities. The Builders knew nothing of war, hatred, murder, lust and greed. They could not defend themselves against the terror of the evil dark ones and the atomic weapons used against them. They could not believe, at first, the actions of their lost brothers and sisters. The Builders would not, and could not, commit themselves to war and destruction. World after world was invaded and destroyed, rendered into oblivion, until the remaining members of † Evil was not created by Divine Spirit but evolved forth through the laws of cause and effect. Free will allowed the sons and daughters of God to sow and reap mental images that they planted. Some human angel beings' inquisitive disposition moved them to override the divine plan and go where Divine Intellect tried to persuade otherwise. Through the memory of former simple and self conscious states in physical forms, they accepted the forbidden challenge of the unknown. This mistake, or fall, unleashed the birth of the fallen angels in time and space within the spheres of creation.

Regression into a negative state of self consciousness arose, devoid of virtue. This degraded state was without any degree of moral conscience, yet filled with the memory and power of former glory (i.e., Christ Consciousness). The birth of powerful fallen angels, known in this world as Lucifer, Set, Satan, etc., took place not by Divine will, but by the free will given them.

the Builders had so diminished that they were faced with total annihilation. Only then was the decision made for warriors, "the shining ones," to step forward and defend the remnants of the Builders. The only advantage they held was their ability to outmaneuver their persecutors, inner-dimensionally, beyond the speed of light in their divine chariots of fire.

Some of the Builders fleeing before the dark forces returned to this solar system from other worlds that had been destroyed by the evil conquerors. The Builders began to orbit the bright blue Earth. Making observations, they found suitable areas on which to land. Some of these areas included parts of South America and one of the three then-existing island continents lying in today's southern Pacific Ocean. These three island continents are now known as the lost lands of Mu, one of the first resting-places of the divine celestial mus of the Builders.

The Builders immediately began construction of a new civilization on Earth. They believed they had escaped for a time, from the dark forces, and that they would not be followed to this insignificant solar system way out on the rim of the galaxy. It was here that the sons and daughters of God first made contact with the primitive evolving sons and daughters of man on this planet. Looking upon their diminished population, the decision was made to speed up the evolution of some of the evolving human creatures on Earth. The Builders decided to cross the genes of the primitive evolving hominids with their own. By doing this, the new creatures would have better brains and stronger physical bodies, and would then be able to join the ranks of the Builders and help them construct a new civilization on Earth. They might also help defend it against attack in the event they were discovered by the fallen angels.

The Builders decided to give the new human beings, Homo sapiens, all the knowledge of the Tree of Life (i.e. the central nervous system, its forces and powers). The new human being was to be given the immortal Baptism of Fire. Then the consciousness of the angels (Christ Consciousness) would descend into them. The Builders were successful, after many attempts, in producing embryos which were a cross between their genetic structures and the then-evolving species of man on Earth, a type like Homo erectus.

The Builders finally produced genetic crosses that resembled them in many respects. The four foundation races of Homo sapiens were now to be incubated and generated through the primitive evolving forms of man. They would carry the imprint, or image, of the Builders, the red, the blue (black), the yellow and the white. "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." (Genesis 1:26).

The four foundation races of man (Homo sapiens) are scattered across the face of the Earth today. One of the foundation races migrated into North America after the so-called great biblical flood and cataclysm. This ancient race is known to us as the Hopi people. The Hopi are the peaceful caretakers of Mother Earth, one part of the remnants of the ancient red race first generated here by the Builders. They are the original guardians of the Earth elements. They still remember their creators, and were given to eat of the Tree of Life from the beginning. The Hopi have been waiting for the return of the Builders for more than twelve thousand years.†

The four foundation races were each given the four colors of corn by the Builders: white, red, blue and yellow. This was to remind them that each foundation race represents one of the four divine cosmic forces, just as the Builders had demonstrated to them: the red race, earth elements; blue race, fire elements; white race, air elements; and the yellow race, water elements. Along with four colors of corn, the ancient hand-clasp of brotherhood was given; it would enable the Builders to recognize each other whenever or wherever they met in future times.

The Builders, the sons and daughters of God, were discovered millenniums ago by their fallen brothers and sisters. The Builders finally lost the wars to defend the Earth against their fallen brethren. However, after their defeat, they vowed to return and raise the spiritual consciousness of humankind by destroying evil and transforming the fallen angels who now possess the Earth. That vow is beginning to manifest itself today all around us.

†In the following quote Hopi elder, White Bear identifies the Hopi Kachinas as we define the Christed human angel beings, the Builders, the sons and daughters of God:

"The meaning of the word Kachina is 'noble, highly respected wise men who help with spiritual evolvement'...If you compare the Kachinas with your Christian figures, you would call Kachinas angels...They were wonderful mighty beings, always willing to help, but never to destroy.

—White Bear, quoted by J. F. Blumrich, in Kasskara und die sieben Welten

Man is the product of evolution; but Homo sapiens is the product of the "gods."

—Zecharia Sitchin, The 12th Planet

Fight the Stupids!

Sometimes good people make honest mistakes. This is not about those people. This is about the willfully stupid people who actually work at being ignorant and staying ignorant, and who make it a personal mission to prevent others from knowing more than they know or doing more than they would ever dare to consider. It's about those who scoff at people 300 years ago for believing the Earth was flat, but are convinced they could never believe a similar absurdity. This is about those who ridicule and oppose anything they don't already believe is true, and who will diligently avoid any effort to fairly evaluate new, especially dramatically new ideas. ³

Why the World Hates Silicon Valley

Silicon Valley is the new Rome. As in the time of Caesar, the world is grappling with an advanced city-state dominating much of the planet, injecting its technology and ethos everywhere it lands and funneling enormous wealth back home.

Thiel is just one of many stories with a similar theme. Facebook got accused of muting conservative news on the site, stirring still more worries about media control and censorship. Meanwhile, Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg made Thiel look like a cheapskate when he paid $30 million to buy and tear down four homes around his residence, just so nobody will be able to see into his windows. Look around the U.S. and you find that Salesforce CEO Marc Benioff wielded the power to reverse an Indiana law that might have discriminated against the LGBT community, by threatening to abandon the state. The Donald Trump phenomenon has been largely fueled by voters angry that their jobs are getting reamed by technology.

Similar angst about California's peninsula of geeks and Ghirardelli has resulted in backlash around the globe. The European Commission is freaking out about Google and Netflix, China has been pushing back against Apple, and India recently stopped a Facebook plan to offer free internet because the government felt India might lose control over its wireless infrastructure. "There are certain rules necessary to operate so India doesn't become a digital colony," Sharad Sharma of Bangalore think tank iSpirt told journalists.

And yet the Silicon Valley Empire is just getting started. A new generation of technologies such as artificial intelligence, 3-D printing and blockchain—all likely to be developed primarily by Silicon Valley companies—are about to cross the chasm from prototype to mainstream and challenge everything you know about manufacturing, money, services, national sovereignty and much else in your life. If you think there's been head-spinning change since 2007, when smartphones, social networks and cloud computing combined to usher in the current tech era, the next 10 years could short-circuit your cortex.

Is all this good or bad? The answer is as complex as asking the same question about the Roman Empire two millennia ago. Nice for some; really sucks for others. With hope, beneficial to humanity in the long run, but we might have to give it a couple of hundred years to really know.

Get Used to That Sucking Sound

Silicon Valley loves to "disrupt" stuff. Well, now it is disrupting the world. Famed tech analyst Mary Meeker this month released her annual data dump about the industry. If you pick it apart, you can clearly see Silicon Valley's ascendancy in the global economy.

For instance, Meeker listed the 20 most valuable tech companies in 2015. Twelve were American, seven were in China, and one was in Japan. None came out of Europe or India or anywhere else. The U.S. companies represented 76 percent of the total market cap and 87 percent of the revenue. Of the dozen companies based in the U.S., just one is not in Silicon Valley (Priceline, based in Connecticut).

Here's a different way to see the tilt toward California: The number of Internet users is growing faster in India than anywhere else in the world. Almost all of that growth is from people using mobile phones. The top three phone apps in India are owned by Facebook (Facebook, WhatsApp and Facebook Messenger), so no wonder India was worried about even more encroachment by the company. Also, almost all of India's mobile phones run on either Google's Android or Apple's iOS operating system. That means a significant proportion of India's most dynamic industry is sending money to Silicon Valley. That kind of thing is happening in every country except, like, North Korea.

In recent years, the payments going to Silicon Valley have been lurching beyond pure technology and into businesses that used to be non-digital and entirely local. Uber shows how that works. The company takes a 20 percent cut of the fare for every ride. In France, say, 100 percent of money spent on taxis used to stay in France. If Uber wins a significant chunk of France's taxi industry, 20 percent of that money will leave France. Now imagine that happening in industry after industry, country after country...

In the macro picture, tech is one of the few economic sectors growing in any meaningful way anywhere in the world. Meeker's stats show that global growth of gross domestic product has been below average for six of the past eight years. So if global growth is stagnant and technology is hot, that means most other segments are really crappy. Since most of the money being made in technology is by companies based in Silicon Valley, it seems that it is driving a lot of the world's economic dynamism—and most of the world is paying Silicon Valley for it.

On the campaign trail, Trump keeps saying America is losing. But he's wrong: America is clearly winning in technology, big time. The problem is that a lot of America is not Silicon Valley, which is but a short stretch from San Francisco to San Jose. Even within the United States, Silicon Valley is playing Rome, and the rest of us could wind up like Judea.

Geography Is Dynasty

We have two Americas now: Atoms America and Bits America. Atoms America is manufacturing, retail, services, restaurants—old-school business you can see and touch. And Atoms America is in trouble. In May, job growth in the U.S. was the slowest in more than five years, according to federal data. Some 10,000 manufacturing jobs disappeared. For years now, middle-class wages have stagnated. A vast swath of people are seeing their jobs automated away by software. Trump's supporters tell pollsters they feel resentful and powerless. Voting for Trump is fighting back.

On the other side of this divide is Bits America. These are people who write code, analyze data, sell apps, invest in startups. The top talent in Bits America entertain bidding wars for their services. There are pockets of Bits America all over the country and high concentrations in places such as Boston, New York, Washington, D.C., and Seattle—each home to significant tech companies. Still, nothing in the Bits universe rivals Silicon Valley—land of peach-fuzz billionaires, rocketing housing prices and highways filled with Teslas, with Stanford University operating like the region's power plant for talent.

More money gets invested in more companies there. In the first quarter of this year, California companies—almost all in Silicon Valley—got $396 million in venture funding, nearly three times more than second-place New York

($149 million) and four times more than third-place Massachusetts ($90 million). And wealth created in Silicon Valley tends to stay home. Even when companies go public, it's not making people rich across the country. Look at the top 40 owners of Facebook stock. Almost all of them live in Silicon Valley. (Thiel, No. 7, owns 2.5 percent, worth more than $2 billion.)

When smart people from all over the world want to build a technology company, they go to Silicon Valley. The Collison brothers grew up in a small village in Ireland. Clearly brilliant, Patrick Collison left Ireland to go to MIT, and John Collison attended Harvard University. In 2010, the brothers started digital payments company Stripe and in 2011 got $2 million in funding from three Silicon Valley venture investors: Sequoia Capital, Andreessen Horowitz and... Thiel. Stripe is now worth more than $5 billion. It's not based in Ireland or Boston. It's in San Francisco.

Silicon Valley's momentum is not slowing. I talk to a lot of Bay Area investors. Ten or 15 years ago, they were flying to China and India, looking for promising investments, and some set up branches around the U.S. Now the attitude of many is they don't need to go beyond a 50-mile circle around Palo Alto. Most of the talent of any consequence is there already or will go there.

For his book The New Geography of Jobs, Enrico Moretti, an economics professor at the University of California, Berkeley, crunched economic data and found that, counterintuitively in this connected age, geography matters a great deal in the tech industry. "In innovation, a company's success depends on more than just the quality of its workers—it also depends on the entire ecosystem around it," Moretti wrote. "It makes it harder to delocalize innovation than traditional manufacturing." An industry like steel or shoes can move to where labor and resources are cheaper. Tech industries need to coalesce in a few places, and Silicon Valley is the most powerful magnet of them all.

Take It All Apart

In 2015, the media ogled "unicorns"—private tech companies valued at more than $1 billion. Private valuations got a little crazy. The word bubble surfaced. Even Silicon Valley insiders predicted a comeuppance. Meeker popped all that bubble babble. "There are pockets of internet company overvaluation," she said. "But there are also pockets of undervaluation. Very few companies will win. Those that do can win big."

We describe it another way in Play Bigger... Our highly networked age has created an environment where one company tends to develop and then dominate a new category of business (as Facebook, Airbnb, VMware and many others have done) and win big over time. Silicon Valley is the best region in the world at generating these category kings, and new ones will become the most valuable companies of the next generation.

It's probable that the coming category kings will dwarf our Facebooks and Googles. Artificial intelligence is a game-changing technology, much like cloud-based apps over the past five years. It will be the basis for inventions we can hardly imagine now. (How about an AI-driven tiny drone that learns to buzz around and keep an eye on a building, replacing security guards? It's coming!) And 3-D printing will get good enough so that a company like Nike will no longer make shoes in Asia and ship them back to the U.S. Instead, it will "print" them in a network of thousands of small factories peppered throughout cities and towns—so you can pick up your ready-made sneakers locally. Blockchain—the complex technology behind bitcoin—is only beginning to remake the financial industry. Virtual reality will get good enough to reinvent stuff like tourism, sports and doctor's office visits. Biotech, robotics—an incredible array of technology is ready to burst upon us.

The impact will be so dramatic, Hemant Taneja of General Catalyst Partners tells me we're heading into a "global application rewrite." We are about to take apart every product and service in the world and put it back together with data, AI and all this other new stuff.

Sure, some of the companies that take advantage will come from places that are not Silicon Valley. Much-ballyhooed virtual reality startup Magic Leap is in Florida. Some important financial tech based on blockchain is coming from New York. But Silicon Valley hosts the majority of companies beginning to drive the global application rewrite. As Meeker said, the few that dominate new businesses will win big over time, all over the world, making it harder than ever for other places to catch up.

So let's go back to whether this is good or bad.

If you pick up your mobile phone, you'll see a lot on there that you used to pay for and now comes free or cheap. You have a camera and a flashlight, both of which you used to buy. News is free—no need to buy a newspaper. International calls are cheap on Skype. Music—free or cheap on Spotify.

That device is just one example of the impact of technology and globalization. It's increasingly making more things cheap or free, in many ways lowering our cost of living. That works on physical goods too—tech and global manufacturing are why you can buy nice clothes at H&M for way less than similar items cost 20 years ago. Technology will only accelerate this trend. Mike Maples, partner at tech investment company Floodgate, tells me we're heading into an age of abundance, when we'll have access to much more for much less than ever before. We'll live better lives on less money. Which seems quite good.

However, as Moretti's data show, that same dynamic crushes the middle class by killing jobs and shrinking salaries. If more stuff is free or cheap, fewer people can earn money making and selling things. Instead, when something gets reduced to a cloud-based app, relatively few people can make it and sell it around the planet—and rake in all the money. Consider maps. Lots of companies used to print them, and lots of stores sold them. Today, there's one consumer map company that matters globally: Google, based in Mountain View, California. Google gets all the map money, and most of those map jobs are gone.

For much of the world outside of Silicon Valley, the bad is starting to feel worse than the good. We love our phones and apps and cheap things, but we don't like feeling economically marginalized. A move like Thiel's against Gawker adds to the sense that an elite few have all the leverage. Books like Martin Ford's Rise of the Robots suggest that technology will replace most of our jobs. Trump has tapped into middle-class anxiety about the future. So has Bernie Sanders, although someone should tell him he's fighting yesterday's war—the easy capitalist villains going forward aren't going to be on Wall Street but up and down California's 101. (Sanders this month drew 4,000 to a rally in Palo Alto, where housing prices and income inequality are leaving non-millionaires behind.)

If you put all the current trends together, it seems obvious Silicon Valley will become the most powerful place on earth at the expense of just about everywhere else on earth. The one thing that might derail the Silicon Valley express would be something like the Russian Revolution, in which the workers rise up against the autocracy. That doesn't seem imminent, but it's a possibility Silicon Valley needs to embrace and counter, or at best it's going to wind up fending off escalating attacks from governments, activists and the frustrated masses. The industry's nightmare would be getting regulated like electricity and telecommunications—industries that once invented cutting-edge technologies but turned into sleepy bureaucracies under government rule...^{*4}

Every American Born Will Need...

Source: Minerals Education Coalition, U.S. Global Investors

ABOVE: DIAGRAM BY US FUNDS — "...EACH PERSON REQUIRES A HUGE SUPPLY OF RESOURCES THROUGHOUT HIS OR HER LIFETIME..." *5

Housebreaking Your New Euro-Snob

Americans are well aware of the requirements for the proper care and feeding of Europeans. For centuries we have few and sheltered their excess population, nourished their famine victims and finished their wars for them. Always with the same result, the nose we've just straightened is now perfect for them to use when they look down upon us. What happens on a national level repeats on a personal level.

These revived WW II losers from both sides are again soiling the floor and positive reinforcement only goes so far. At some point these, as the haut couture set would call them, 'Le Nouveau Euro Effete,' need to have their soil spot noted and given the traditional and polite nose rubbing. This again, goes for national and personal level.

The newest Euro-Snobbery is their superior European Union, the EU and it's currency the euro. This union is based on the consistently failed socialist model which only rewards and increases laziness. The few productive EU states are having their life blood sucked by the increasing indolent welfare states. Meanwhile the replacement for Interpol, the Europol is baffled by the theft of 100 billion euros in fake carbon credits, also known as "Thin Air Certificates", more EU green madness gone awry.

Regional snobbery is the currently accepted, politically correct substitute for the traditional forms of snobbery based on tribe, religion and race. In America, this snobbery is also manifested as the superiority complex of the east coast, left coast and liberal city-states like Boulder and Austin. There is one primary reason that many chose to live in America's heartland. We do not like being surrounded and outnumbered by liberal loons and their supporting goons.

This 'better-than-them' snobbery is highly destructive. It is time for the collective human conscious to recognize and correct this congenital defect. That must begin with an understanding of conscious. Human conscious, if it is to form, does so at an early age. We are born totally self centered. At the time we recognize our own being, our own thoughts and our own morality we are still children, dependent of those around us who are larger to nurture and protect us.

We soon learn that the larger world is overwhelmingly threatening. Only certain locations are safe, your home, your backyard, your room, or in the case of abused children, just your own mind. This is the sacred land of the child consciousness. As we grow and expand our capabilities, we are able to better cope with the larger threatening world. But, conscious is still rooted in the recognition that there is a greater power and that there are selected locations that offer protection.

As we develop we receive constant reminders that actions have consequences. Touch a hot stove, get a burn. Jump off the roof, get sore feet. Prolonged contact with a hot stove will leave a lifetime scare. Jumping off of a too tall roof will lead to life-long paralysis or death. Thus conscious comes with these parameters, there is something greater than you, there are places of safety and of danger and finally, that human actions can and do have permanent consequences. These conditions form the basis of all religions.

Going beyond regional snobbery is the next politically correct and politically demanded insult to conscious, scientific snobbery. This scientific elitism rejects the previously mentioned conditions of conscious for a self-aggrandized position of moral detachment. This then REQUIRES that science is not allowed to consider concepts like a supreme being, punishment for sin, or the existence of a human soul.

Not all scientists have fallen into this blinding mental trap. Newton and Einstein were both undeniably religious, and both held beliefs that were life threatening. Newton rejected both the Roman Catholic and English Anglican misinterpretations of the Bible at a time when such thoughts were heresy and still punished by burning at the stake. Einstein would have been burned in an oven just for his birth, regardless if he had continued further and actually believed in Judaism.

Only when science is robbed of its moral roots in conscious, is it powerful enough to proclaim itself the leading moral force in the Universe. It is this perverse distortion of conscious that has allowed the climate science goons to dictate all human behavior based on a simplistic hypothesis and supported by a framework of lies. Climate fraud is but a symptom of a wider disease, the lack of scientific freedom.

But there can be no scientific freedom without the larger freedoms like free speech, free association, free movement and freedom of religion. I am a proud American, born into the conflict of pioneer spirit and Native American soul, in a place of sacred lands and future happy hunting grounds. I make no apologies for my spiritual connection to this greater conscious world.

I began a dialogue with the world two years ago, based at first on fighting the Faux Science of climate fraud. It has been obvious from the beginning that this fraud was just one manifestation of a far wider and dangerous defect. Human conscious and destiny have been hijacked, much like climate science and is being misguided for destruction. It is this greater evil that I have chosen to confront.

This article is a continuation of that dialogue and in particular, a rebuttal to unfounded complaints about my previous article, "The Vacuum Under the Soetoro Sombrero". I categorically reject complaints that this article was too religious, too political or that using Obama's adopted name is demeaning conservative rhetoric. Obama is just the last in a series of elitist puppets who are all unworthy of any respect due to the true creators and past defenders of our noble, if still unrealized national ideals.

Satan Steals a War Hero's Soul

Any serious student of science must also be a student of science history in order to place this evolution of thought into context. Soon this requires study of all history. In tracing the roots of Faux Science it soon becomes apparent that society is being manipulated and misdirected by Faux History in much the same way that science has been manipulated. Our nation is not now, and never has been perfect, but to be a rabid America hater requires a distorted presentation of historical facts.

The atomic bombings of Japan offer just such a distortion. The "Soetoro Sombrero" article presented a series of suppressed and formerly classified facts that supported these drastic bombings that ended World War II. Condemning America requires ignoring the history we would now be dealing with, had the suppressed historical events not occurred.

If the Japanese submarine I-52 made a successful arrival at Lorient and returned with its intended cargo of 550 Kilograms of radioactive U-235 then America would have faced Japan's dirty "bomb of now" on our mainland. Had the captain of the German submarine U-234 continued to Japan the same thing would have happened, even though a then devastated Japan would have been the only Axis power in the world.

FDR and Stalin had a mutual disclosure treaty on all captured military technology. To avoid this treaty the four fully functional, captured Japanese super submarine aircraft carriers and their ten accompanying aircraft were studied for two weeks and then sunk off the coast of Hawaii. These rumored weapons were finally located in 2002. With no knowledge of this information it is possible to misconstrue America as a nuclear bully.

Being an actual bully does leave its mark on your soul. The love dance that Japanese soldier practiced on their conquered Chinese partners went something like this:

First capture her neighbors, father, brothers and sons
Then have them dig graves, then kneel, hands bound when done
After bayonet practice, the actual sex acts can start
And then ends with the Chinese girls gets stabbed in the heart

Decades of this brutality left the victims hatred soaked into these twisted Samurai souls. In their own country these soldiers and admitted cannibals were never respected, only feared for the evil flashing from their eyes.

The brutality of one side soon reflected in the other as James Bradley so well documents in his book "Flyboys". The airman mentioned in my "Soetoro Sombrero" was Distinguished Flying Cross airman, George H Bush. By age twenty this real war hero had seen the Pacific islands and fleets covered with the skulls and bones of the warriors of tyranny and the defenders of freedom.

This once great young man returned to join a far different fraternity of skulls and bones. These Yale elitists soon twisted this young officer's soul. There is no question that America and her allies committed atrocities in winning an atrocious war. But, there is no parity with the level of evil on the other side. Germany invaded Poland with the Nazi-Soviet Alliance still secret. As Nazis invaded from the west, Russians entered to rescue the Poles from the east.

Not knowing the conspiracy, Polish officers and military assisted the Russian invasion and were soon captured and 22,000 were immediately executed. One need only compare the allied occupation of Germany, Japan and Korea to understand that post war America was a better victor to those fallen nations than the Russians or the Red Chinese.

In "Flyboys" airman Bush was described as a post war successful businessman, director of the CIA, Ambassador to China, Vice President and then President. Impressive, until examined. The successful 'business' was a no-fail, cost plus, CIA front organization. His subsequent leadership of the CIA saw its ascension to the world's premier assassination, drug and illegal weapons running operation.

As nice as President Reagan was, he was overly trusting and an admitted delegator who only spent a few hours a day on running the country. Nancy Reagan was quite bitter over those below him who betrayed his trust and our nation. Reagan, none the less, took responsibility for the repeated errors and never held to account those who were actually responsible for the crimes of Iran-Contra, the Savings and Loan Crisis and more.

As President, Bush did cast a billion Chinese back into bondage when democracy was sweeping across the Soviet Blok. Soon after the Soviet collapse, the cabal of elitists filled the power void and stole all the resources of Russia, casting these briefly freed souls into first poverty and then reinstated soft tyranny.

Saturday, Sept 2, 1944, Lt Bush flew his Navy Hellcat bomber, off of the deck of the carrier USS San Jacinto and into the targeted radio station on top of the summit on Japanese held Chichi Jima. His plane was destroyed by anti-aircraft fire and gunner Ted White and radioman John Delaney lost their lives that day. One must wonder how those heroes would judge their pilot's post war behavior.

Provoked Thought Produces Truth

History is filled with repugnant facts. Any thinking human is forced to confront the fact that there are both good and bad behaviors. Moral judgments do not require scientific detachment. Sometimes in confronting evil, one can get infected with your opponent's disease. The question that your soul will bear for eternity is how and when you chose to deal with your internal demon.

The elitists have set numerous traps for humanity in the past. They have many at present, but by far the worst are still just planned. An ever increasing portion of humanity is now awakened to this threat and chances for elitist victory in reestablishing their feudal society are doomed to failure.

My dialogue with the world is not meant to mold your thoughts, but rather to provoke thought. The internet has provided a forum where the petty snobbery of the past can have no bearing on debate and where appeals to authority recognize only one truth. For science that one truth is empirical and all around us. For conscious that one truth is that there is always a greater power.

The fact that there are moral rights and moral wrongs is empirical. The fact that a conscious mind requires a human spirit and that many spirits have combined to form a human conscious is undeniable... *6

ABOVE: COMIC BY MANU CORNET *7 / "IN THE 2000S, USERS NICKNAMED THE FIRST MAINSTREAM SMARTPHONE THE CRACKBERRY..." *8

Inside Bush Doof Culture

Australia's bush doof scene doesn't attract your regular bachelor and spinster crew. Bush doofers dance in the dirt and slap the air with laughter and groans that are guttural and free-sounding. These individuals have escaped the picket fences and computer screens... at least for the weekend. There's a tinge of tribal protest in their dress—scruffy dreadlocks and free-flowing music. And of course, some might be under the influence of psychedelic drugs. Strong ones.

The culture of bush doof

Today, the history of bush doof is scattered (although the term has now been accepted into the Macquarie dictionary as legitimate). It's hard to pinpoint any global event responsible for creating the foundations of this cultural trend, with bush doofs existing, at least in some form, for approximately four decades. One of the most recognised is America's Woodstock festival from the '60s, along with India's Goa beach parties that were founded in the '70s. Burning Man, Rainbow Serpent and other mainstream and alternative local music festivals like Splendour In The Grass and Meredith Music Festival have also played a role in making the bush doof scene what it is today.

... Walk onto a certain Victorian proprietor's land towards the end of January, and you won't spot cattle grazing behind rusting fences. Instead, you'll see a half-built pirate ship, rainbow-coloured tents and festival-goers dressed up as mermaids and fairies. There'll might also be nymphs running around.

In NSW, there are festivals such as psy-trance extravaganza New Psytle, Earth Frequency and Regrowth Festival; in the ACT, Dragon Dreaming makes an annual appearance outside of Canberra; in central Australia, Wide Open Space brings bush doof grandeur to Alice Springs, with an opening ceremony involving electronica, indigenous performances and a heavy metal stage. These festivals attract people searching for something new—they combine the light and art shows festival-goers are used to with the most cutting edge DJ sets complete with 3D speakers and kinetic technology. They also keep a focus on the indigenous cultures of Australia and psychedelic expression.

Doofs often rely on word of mouth and social networking to get invitations out, and reviews and photographs of them rarely appear on major websites. Instead, a mixture of veteran and amateur journalists and photographers document the events through their own blogs and websites. There's an intimate feeling of community and safety, especially at these smaller events, which sets them apart from mainstream music festivals such as Soundwave or Big Day Out.

"You can go [to a doof] expecting an interaction, you can leave feeling creative fulfilment," says 19-year-old DJ and doof enthusiast Isaac Noorman from Victoria. "Alternative culture presents the facilities to have a better time. It's not all about the music," he says.

Twenty-one-year-old artist Bonnie-Jean Whitlock agrees. "I feel like everybody's not competing to get to the front to see the artist. Everyone's there to dance and enjoy the music. Everyone respects each other and looks after each other."

The experience

And my own personal experience? Earlier this year I attended Bojangles, an underground bush doof located in rural Victoria. Invitations and promotions went out via word of mouth and social networking sites such as Facebook, and the location (a private property) was only released to prospective punters a day or two before the party was due to commence.

It was freezing cold when we arrived at the campsite. Doofers were dressed in thermals with animal onesies, ponchos or cloaks layered over the top. I decided to take note from the Russians and polished off half a bottle of vodka and a few other things the first night in order to keep warm. Then it began.

The stage was setup with lights and kinetic technology, glowing jellyfish hung under a canopy behind the crowd and projector screens played videos of lights. The dancing crowd had pupils the size of five cent coins and artworks were being painted right in front of attendees' eyes. Then there was a bust of red and green glitter and the doof became one huge, pumping, stamping organism. The community had surpassed the tribal and entered the metaphysical. The next morning, serotonin was low, but the mix was passed around, the ashes of the fire stoked. Punters wandered around stalls, munched on crepes and desperately searched for a new friend who might have a kettle they could boil a cup of herbal tea in.

This cultivated sense of community doesn't evaporate into thin air once punters return to 'reality'. Post doof, post crazy pseudo (or not so) philosophical conversation under a haze of fairy lights and hallucinogenic drugs, festival-goers come back to reality and want to re-create the experience. After a weekend spent soaking up the creative atmosphere, hanging out in cuddle-puddles (a doof phenomenon that is exactly what it sounds like; a group of people doing nothing but cuddling in a pile on the ground), and hearing proclamations of love, attendees want to keep sharing the message. "[Bush doofs] create an environment, which is not judgemental in any way, and very inspiring," explains 22-year-old doofer Justin Rodwell from Victoria.

Opposition to bush doof

Not all bush doofs are well-organised explorations of creativity, however. As a result, negative opposition has surfaced across mainstream media. Recent reports of bush doofs have depicted them as carving a new niche for violence, underage drinking and aggression.

For example, in May 2013, News Corp Australia journalists Briana Domjen and Emmanuel Sokias reported on incidents that occurred during a bush doof hosted in Kellyville. "They're a wild breeding ground for wild behaviour, sexual assault, violence and underage-drinking—and they're as tough to control as your average 16-year-old," lead the journalists' article. The story then went on to suggest that the often uncontrolled nature of bush doofs causes great strain on law enforcers. Inspector Helen Dean of The Hills local area command in north-west Sydney told the reporters: "Anything on Facebook for us is a nightmare because it is so far reaching. We are always worried something like this could get out of control, innocent people could get hurt and properties could be damaged. I appreciate they are kids who want to hang out and have a good time but we know what can go wrong."

But in my opinion...

Festivals like Rainbow Serpent, Bojangles, New Psyche, Wide Open Space and Eathcore collaborate with the crowds they attract. Punters are allowed freedom of expression and a chance to stomp around the bush feeling their freest. It's this overarching sense of community that aids the organisation of a festival. It's all about cultivating and engaging a collective social conscience. In my opinion, the bush doof is a place of culture, art and music. It is a common-ground dwelling that offers a perplexing serenity for those looking for a different experience. Bush doof is about family—a crazy, but accepting family. ⁹

... Found Alive After Going Missing in the Alabama Wilderness for a MONTH, Surviving on Only Berries and Wild Mushrooms!

A woman who went missing in the Alabama wilderness has been found alive after a month.

Lisa Theris, 25, said she survived by eating berries and wild mushrooms while she was lost amid thousands of acres of dense forest in Midland, Alabama without shoes or shelter.

By the time she was found, Theris had lost 50 pounds and was covered in scratches and bug bites. She did not have a phone or purse on her.

Theris was finally reunited with her family after she made it to the wood line on Highway 82 and was spotted by a driver around 2pm on Saturday.

A woman saw 'something moving in the bushes' as she was driving along the highway, and turned around, Sheriff Raymond Rodgers told WFSA.

'She called us and told us she had located the missing person. Finally the young lady has been found and she's alive.'

It brought to an end a multi-county search for the radiologist student, who was reported missing on July 23.

Police discovered that Theris was with two men who broke into a hunting lodge in Midway before she disappeared.

They said Theris did not know the men were planning to break into the lodge and did not want to be a part of the robbery.

The two men, Manley Davis and Randall Oswald, were arrested and charged following the theft.

'She's not familiar with this area and apparently on the night she ran, she went into the woods at night and got lost,' Rodgers said.

Davis, 31, and Oswald, 36, allegedly stole $40,000 worth of items that included four-wheelers, ATVS, and chainsaws.

They were both arrested and charged with burglary and were considered persons of interest in Theris' disappearance.

Theris told police that along with foraging for berries and mushrooms, she drank water from a brook and puddles.

She tried to keep moving but, deprived of food and hunger, she was often turning around in circles.

Police said their first focusing was making sure Theris got immediate treatment.

'We didn't ask her too many questions,' Rodgers said. 'We want to make sure her health is good so we got her on to the hospital. We did not interrogate her at that time...' *10

K-12: A Short History of U.S. Educational Failure

(Last October I delivered a speech at the "Thinking Ahead" conference in Milan. The title there was "Know Thine Enemy.")

It's a great honor to be invited here....Normally I write a thousand words on a well-defined topic. It didn't make sense to fly to Italy to deliver another of those. So I went to the other extreme—a big-picture look at K-12 education in the US for more than a century.

Here are the questions we need to answer: why is education so difficult to reform, so locked in place? How do we break out of this paralysis?

I worry that if we don't take this effort to a higher level, there will be another conference 20 years from now and it will be the same. I call this the Groundhog Day Syndrome. Every day you get up, it's a new day. No, it's the same day.

I have no grandiose theories, only one basic principle. Children should be educated to whatever level they can handle. The problem in the US is that millions of students are being systematically under-educated. This steals from the children, and dumbs down the society. What kind of people would do that?

This talk has seven chapters, roughly chronological. 1) Ideology; 2) 1984; 3) Groundhog Day; 4) My God, How The Money Rolls In; 5) How They Wrecked The Schools and Keep Them Wrecked; 6) The Matrix; and 7) So What Are You Going To Do About It?

For background, let's consider one of the more common questions heard in the US: why are the public schools so messed up? The Education Establishment (I mean the people at the top) blame everybody but themselves: parents, kids, society, drugs, video games, rock 'n roll, global warming, and of course, there is never enough money. Our education officials spend 650 billion-a-year. I predict you could give them another 100 billion and nothing would change. Because they have embraced so many counterproductive theories and methods. But why?

At some point I realized this talk could be called know thine enemy, a phrase in both the Bible and Chinese theorist Sun Tzu. This is good advice for reformers. We have to look at the whole battlefield. We have to understand the opposing side. As Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid famously asked, Who Are These Guys?

For one thing, they are incompetents. If education were a business, every boss would be fired. All they know is finding fads and other unproductive ideas, and then doubling down on them.

I see this particularly in reading where the main theories have been discredited again and again but the Education Establishment keeps them in play. I see this pattern throughout K-12 education. If there is an inefficient way to do things, our professors will use it. But why?

Ten years ago I reread, Rudolf Flesch's Why Johnny Can't Read and then I read books on the other side, for example, Reading without Nonsense by the hugely influential Frank Smith. He casually claimed that an ordinary person can master a sight vocabulary of 50,000 to 100,000 words. That's as crazy as saying a baby can fly. Once I understood that Frank Smith was lying, I had to grapple with the repellent image of professors sitting around a table to discuss the design of reading instruction that keeps children from reading.

Here are three of my favorite reformers:

During the 1960s, Mary Johnson took on the whole education establishment in Canada. She was remarkably tough and clever. She wrote a book in 1973 with this revelatory title: Programmed illiteracy in our schools. Mary Johnson figured out the whole nasty business decades ahead of almost everybody else. Savor the word programmed.

Since 1999, there is a free book on the Internet by Charlotte Iserbyt. Title: The Deliberate Dumbing Down of America. Savor the word deliberate.

A few years ago, the wonderful Samuel Blumenfeld, said: “K-12 education is a criminal enterprise from top to bottom.” He explained that the educators take money and in return, they damage children. Blumenfeld wanted to know, if that’s not criminal, what is??

These three and another half-dozen are experts we can trust. Here’s the essence of their conclusions: we are up against ruthless social engineers. If keeping children illiterate is acceptable to them, what would not be acceptable?

Chapter 1: Ideology and how it’s intertwined with education.

Science has been riding high for centuries. Traditional religions have been undermined. When people give up on their religion, they often seek a substitute, ideally, a large compelling theory. For example, Communism.

Karl Marx, who died in 1883, set the gold standard for the big idea. He said he was a scientist, and could explain history. He said capitalism would be destroyed by revolution. Communism would win. It’s inevitable!... But if this doesn’t happen, you have to work twice as hard to make it happen.

These intellectual currents collide to this day. Here’s an example. Marxist predictions didn’t seem to be working out—until 1929. Then the stock market crashed, proving to many that Marx was right. Capitalism and America were finished. The Left was overjoyed. And eager to capitalize on a crisis. A year or two later, without any planning or testing, the Education Establishment kicked phonics out of the schools and introduced sight-words. 85 years later we’re still fighting this same battle.

Progressive ideologies tend to be cold and abstract. I think that’s why we see so much desperate fanaticism in the 20th century. For example, Stalin killed 20 million of his own people. Mao Zedong killed 50 or 60 million of his people.

But the best guy for our purposes is Pol Pot. He was in Paris and then he went back to Cambodia, in the early 1970s, to build a workers’ paradise. Marx said, to reach communism, you must go through industrialization and capitalism. So Pol Pot was trying the impossible and, in the process, killed 25% of his own country, one-and-a-half million people. For nothing.

Here’s my question. As bodies piled up, how did Pol Pot feel about himself? I believe he was proud.

I submit to you that elite professors at the top schools of education are best understood as little Pol Pots. Perhaps they won’t execute you but they will dumb down your schools. I think of them as the bad guys; I’m sure they see themselves as noble warriors for a perfect future.

Bottom-line, ideology is a powerful force. American K-12 is full of wacky, dangerous ideas that should never have been adopted. I don't think we can explain this unless we factor ideology into the equations.

Chapter 2: 1984

1984... one of the greatest novels and a brilliant study of the totalitarian soul. But why did Orwell choose that title?

Some say it's a sarcastic reference to 1884, the founding date of the Fabian Society in London, by Beatrice and Sidney Webb, 1984 being the hundredth anniversary.

Beatrice and Sidney Webb had an idea for taking over the world without firing shots, winning votes, or asking for public approval. Key ingredients for the Fabian strategy were patience and secrecy. They named themselves after the famous Roman general, Fabian, who devised a strategy for defeating Hannibal: take your time.

First, you recruit young Pol Pots, so to speak, from Oxford and Cambridge. They find jobs in media, foundations, universities, etc. At 25 they are lower management; at 35 they are middle management; at 45 they're upper management and running everything. QED: Fabians rule.

Beatrice had an insight that Americans were not ready for the word socialism. She laid down the edict that Fabians in America should call themselves Progressives. They should use the word Democratic instead of socialistic. I think it's correct to say that John Dewey—the most famous intellectual of his age, the father of American education—was a quintessential Fabian Socialist. Then his every action, his every statement, make perfect sense.

Education was not a federal function in the US. Every town built a school and hired a teacher. America was the Wild West for a schemer like John Dewey. Then you add John Rockefeller, his billions, and the fact that the public hated him. So Rockefeller gave vast amounts of money to education, specifically the building of schools of education where Dewey's ideology could be celebrated.

The schools recruited young people to be trained in the right way. They returned to their towns in Kansas and Oregon to start indoctrinating kids. John Dewey hated individualism. He wanted little children working as a team. Whether they learned anything was secondary.

Point is, Beatrice and Sidney Webb are still with us today, patiently meddling. John Dewey haunts every classroom. Their plans, both in the UK and the US, had three things in common. Conspiracy, Secrecy, and Contempt (i.e., the public's opinion was deemed irrelevant).

Chapter 3, Groundhog Day

Everything in education connects to everything else. More startling, nothing ever changes. If you know a good anecdote from 1940, it's hot news now because the same battles are fought over and over.

Here's the reason. Dewey and his Progressives had as their first goal the elimination of traditional education. But ordinary people want traditional education.

I used to think this term was old-fashioned; and couldn't be defined precisely. Now I think I was wrong. Here's a working definition:

Traditional education means you start with reading, writing, and arithmetic. Arithmetic leads to higher forms of math. The study of geography leads to systematic study of history, whereby children learn names, dates, and places. General science leads to biology, chemistry, and physics. Along the way you have arts and literature.

That's it! That's what everyone wants. That's what they're doing in every private school in America, every Montessori school, every Classical Academy. That's why 2 million Americans homeschool.

99% of the human race wants traditional education. But our Progressives seek to destroy it. They want every school to be a factory that makes one product: little progressives.

So you end up with a very strange and lopsided standoff. 200+ million Americans, uninformed and divided, want traditional education. Meanwhile, 5,000 dedicated ideologues mobilize each day to promote their Progressive vision.

Chapter 4, My God, how the money rolls in

This section I owe entirely to a smart, witty guy named Albert Lynd. He wrote a delightful book in 1951 called Quackery in the Public Schools.

He points out that education is the only field where after you graduate and have your diploma, that's just the beginning. You must go back to school at the end of the day, over weekends, or during the summer. An endless array of redundant courses are inflicted on young teachers.

There are 3 million teachers. It seems there is a vast secret school system going on year-round. Professors at Harvard have a whole secondary income as visiting lecturers.

Second, these professors can monitor the teachers, to make sure they aren't trying to sneak back to phonics, etc.

Albert Lynd quotes course titles from a catalog for 1949, to show that they were repetitious: theories of education, history of education, principles of education, methods of education. Lynd coined the funny phrase course breeding as if they are rabbits in the backyard.

Albert Lynd showed me a surprising thing: our Socialists created a Capitalistic crusade that pays for itself, with lots of money flying around to buy loyalty.

Here are typical salaries. While US teachers make 40,000 a year, principals and administrators make 150,000 doing things that aren't complicated. The big gainers are the superintendents, who make 200,000 and far beyond. I think their main job is to enforce all the bad ideas in the schools.

Here's another way money is generated. By using the wrong methods, the school does not teach kids to read in the first grade. In the US when children don't do well, they are labeled learning-disabled. This allows money to pour in from Washington DC under Title I. You see there is a sick incentive to do a bad job. Children are put on separate, unnecessary tracks, in second, third, and beyond, with layers of assessment, remediation, psychiatric counseling, and prescriptions of Ritalin. The kids have dyslexia, ADHD, and all the other misery that goes with misguided education.

A year ago I encountered an English drinking song that perfectly captures the cool cynicism of American K-12:

*My grandad sells cheap prophylactics,
And punctures them all with a pin,
For grandma gets rich from abortions,
My God, how the money rolls in, rolls in.
My God, how the money rolls in.*

Chapter 5: How they wrecked the schools and keep them wrecked

A few months back, I wondered if I could summarize the last hundred years in a flow chart.

Here it is: The top horizontal box shows how they wrecked the schools. The second box reveals how they keep them wrecked.

HOW THEY WRECKED THE SCHOOLS

ELIMINATE ALL GOOD IDEAS:	ADD EVERY BAD IDEA:
The 3 R's. Cursive. Phonics. Arithmetic with Mastery. Facts. Knowledge. Academics. Aesop's Fables. Geography. Literature, General Science, History, Second Language, Homework, Tests, Grades, Proper Spelling, Accuracy, Promptness, Real Critical Thinking; Teacher teaches directly. Teacher is supported by principal and community. Schools try to build character.	No Cursive. No memorization of multiplication tables, facts, etc. Do memorize sight-words. Reform Math (12 varieties). Constructivism. Cooperative Learning. Ignore spelling and grammar. Self-Esteem, Fuzziness, Social Studies. Guessing. Disdain for right answers. Relevance, Multiculturalism. Pretend Critical Thinking. Disorderly Schools. Permissive About Cheating. No direct instruction. Testing and grades are scorned,

Getting rid of good ideas creates, In effect, empty warehouse.

Kids are ignorant but still normal; can still be saved.

It's the bad ideas that damage them.

Bad ideas are like computer viruses: must be deliberately inserted but can be deliberately removed...

What if we could have 1917 again? Yes, this is good but we would want more emphasis on fun.

HOW THEY KEEP THEM WRECKED

The Education Establishment creates a semantic fog so that no two Americans can have a helpful conversation about education. There's a constant flood of jargon, marketing phrases, weird new methods. One phrase can refer to many things. Conversely, several different terms can refer to the same thing. For example, Inquiry, Investigations, Constructivism, Project-Based Learning, and Discovery, they all refer to the same thing. The key feature is actually hidden: teachers can no longer teach directly. Sight-words have 10 different names going back to 1930. Half of them are still in play. But the main fog is the relentless introduction of new jargon, new so-called theories, innovations that are supposed to represent the final triumph of progressive education, until they are discarded a few years later

The first step is very simple: they get rid of all the good ideas. Here is a partial list: The 3 R's. Cursive. Phonics. Arithmetic with Mastery. Facts and knowledge. Academics. Aesop's Fables. Geography. Literature. General Science. History. Second Language. Homework. Tests. Grades. Proper Spelling. Accuracy. Promptness. Real Critical Thinking. Teacher teaches directly. Teacher is supported by principal and community.

Imagine you finish the first step. The good ideas are vanquished. You have a big empty warehouse. Kids could come every day. One year or five years, they'd still be ignorant kids but they won't be damaged... It's when you add the bad ideas that you get the ADHD, dyslexia, depression, insomnia, psychological problems.

Here's a partial list of the bad ideas: No Cursive or phonics. Sight-words. No Memorization. Reform Math (12 varieties). Constructivism. Cooperative Learning. Ignore spelling and grammar. Self-Esteem. Fuzziness. Social Studies. Guessing. Disdain for right answers. Relevance. Multiculturalism. Pretend Critical Thinking. Disorderly Schools. Permissive About Cheating. No direct instruction. Teachers don't teach. Testing and grades are scorned.

The bad ideas can be compared to viruses in your computer. You have a virus for only one reason: some criminal wants to hurt you or steal your money. The good news is that a technician can take them out one by one. I think the same thing is true of public schools. Get rid of bad ideas, return to traditional education, I think we'd be in great shape. The only change we need is to make the schools more fun, more entertaining, because you catch more flies with honey than vinegar.

The bottom box is how do they keep them wrecked. We could spend a day here. The basic insight is that the Education Establishment corrupts language and muddles meaning... We have endless jargon, propaganda, marketing ploys, disinformation, sophistries, deceptions, and fabulous fictions. The result is that no two Americans can have a helpful conversation about education. Each year there is a new flood of confusing terms.

Here is the single best illustration of the point. Going back to 1931, Whole Word has 10 other names at least. Look-say, sight-words, word method, memory method, whole word, whole language, balanced literacy, Dolch words, Fry words, high-frequency words, Zeno words, and probably others.

The Education Establishment manufactures semantic fog that guarantees cognitive confusion. That's how the bad ideas are kept in play.

Chapter 6: The Matrix

During the last few years I became fascinated by how quiet our leaders are. The schools dumb down the kids but nobody seems to care. Specifically, we see no analysis in newspapers. Ivy League universities remain quiet. Foundations look the other way. Has anybody on Wall Street or in Hollywood made reading their special passion?

I started using the phrase, The Big Silence. It was an interesting way to talk about the startling passivity among our upscale people. Then I realized it wasn't pointing at the most ominous aspect.

Whether by coordination or some progressive instinct, many different factors and forces in American society look the other way in unison. The uniformity is scary.

I've often written about the Swamp of Sophistry. Teachers in New York City call their industry The Blob. Both images are soft and mushy. But somehow our indifferent leaders are rigid. They can't be moved.

So now I'm seeing a giant crystal. [I interlaced my fingers to show the complex structure]. Each finger is one of the players: unions, foundations, media, banks, political parties, Wall Street, Hollywood, Chamber of Commerce, Silicon Valley, and the rest, all locked into an unyielding design I call the Matrix. It's what makes K-12 so hard to reform.

Chapter 7: So what are we going to do about it?

Is there hope? Realistically, not much. But here are some options to think about:

Ideally, you would have a huge VIP on your side. For example, in the US, imagine what Donald Trump could do with one tweet each week. Or here in Italy, the Pope discusses reading and the beauty of Italian for 60 seconds each month. He could turn things around.

A variation on the VIP is a very big corporation, rich and prestigious, possibly a financial institution, publisher, or tech company. This VIP company would adopt education or reading. Imagine the big company's every magazine ad with an inset in the corner, with a title like Education in Crisis. Brief copy would attack specific malfeasance in the schools.

In America we did have a VIP jumping into battle. But he was on the wrong side. Bill Gates threw away almost 2 billion of his own money pushing Common Core.

I wrote a snarky article a year ago titled “If Bill Gates really wants to help education...” I described how he would create a large competition named the Gates Prizes. There are many thousands of brilliant people in graphic design, moviemaking, advertising, game design, programming. Let’s get these people working on educational software. Give the best creations a serious prize, $25,000 or $50,000. Winners would get lots of publicity, people would try the products.

Without such powerful friends and corporations, I think the best hope is to distill every message you have to the fewest possible words and market them as aggressively as has ever been done.

Intellectuals like to explain and discuss. It’s our natural activity but I want to make this radical suggestion: don’t explain and discuss to the general public, not at first contact. They’re busy trying to survive. Think of the young mother with two children, a boring job, and a difficult husband. You have to tell her quickly and simply what you want her to know. Do this, don’t do that.

I asked myself, is there a literary genre where you have to eliminate every unnecessary syllable. This is comical because it took me a minute to say: Oh yeah, the recipe! The prescription!

You are given steps to follow. Follow them and you have a chocolate cake or your illness goes away...

I’ll give one example to show the whole concept. Imagine a small piece of paper... It has a distinctive border; if you saw it in the newspaper or on the street, you would know it’s the same campaign. But the thing I’m seeing is a bookmark. It’s laminated for a simple reason: nobody throws away a laminated object.

Let’s suppose the first project is to tell people how to teach reading.

I tried to think of the perfect title: The importance of reading... How children learn to read... I almost slapped myself because those titles are exactly what should not be done. They discuss and explain.

Then I got the perfect title. Teach A Child To Read. It’s an order. Get off the sofa and do it! No discussion is invited.

Step 1 says the child must learn the alphabet. Step 2 explains that each letter stands for a sound. Step 3 says that blending two sounds to make a third sound is the essence of reading... Print a million bookmarks and distribute widely for months. Parents will know how to protect their kids...^{*11}

“In school, you’re taught a lesson and then given a test. In life, you’re given a test that teaches you a lesson.”
—Tom Bodett

“Your life will be transformed when you make peace with your shadow. The caterpillar will become a breathtakingly beautiful butterfly. You will no longer have to pretend to be someone you’re not. You will no longer have to prove you’re good enough. When you embrace your shadow you will no longer have to live in fear. Find the gifts of your shadow and you will finally revel in all the glory of your true self. Then you will have the freedom to create the life you have always desired.” —Debbie Ford

“There are some ideas so wrong that only a very intelligent person could believe them.” —George Orwell

“To forgive is to set a prisoner free and discover that the prisoner was you.” —Lewis B. Smedes

ABOVE: "OMEGA CODE" ARTWORK BY BERTHJAN ACHTEROP AND THEO AARTSMA — 'SET YOUR MIND FREE OF THE WORLD'S SHADOW' *12

The Keystone of the Islamic Milieu: Inbreeding

The darkest hour is just before dawn. A huge swath of this planet, from the Straits of Gibraltar to the Philippine Sea, has been held in a synthetic, forced nightfall for nearly fourteen centuries. But the sunrise is coming, it is coming sooner rather than later, and this light will be the life of men.

Everywhere in the western world, people look at the savage violence that is a daily occurrence in the Muslim world and shake their heads in stunned disbelief. A pastor of a very small Christian flock in Florida burns a Koran. Weeks later at literally the global antipode, Muslim imams drive through neighborhoods in a vehicle with loudspeakers attached, calling the townsfolk to riot. The townsfolk respond, and before it is all over, at least 22 innocent people are dead at the hands of these townsfolk, with at least two of them beheaded. How is this possible? How can this be? How can human behavior and culture be so monstrously different? Is this difference attributable to nothing more than environmental nurture theory?

No. There is something else. There is a catalyst—absent in every other culture on earth—that has poisoned the cultural soil, thus yielding the fruit of bad harvest for nearly 1,400 years. That catalyst is inbreeding. As a direct result, the Muslim population is mentally developmentally disabled on a mass scale.

All human cultures display strict prohibitions against inbreeding and consanguineous marriage. Incest is a universal taboo. This is a transcendent anthropological fact. As a Roman Catholic, I attribute this to what is called "The Natural Law." Every human person without exception is created by God with a deep, innate knowledge of good and evil, right and wrong. Stabbing someone in the neck for no reason whatsoever is just as wrong here in Lone Tree, Colorado as it is in the Amazon basin, as it is on the high plateaus of Mongolia.

But there is one culture, one faux "religion," that expressly condones and encourages consanguineous marriage and breeding. That system is Islam, and the document that explicitly ratifies incest is the Koran, specifically Sura 4 verse 23:

Prohibited for you (in marriage) are your mothers, your daughters, your sisters, the sisters of your fathers, the sisters of your mothers, the daughters of your brother, the daughters of your sister, your nursing mothers, the girls who nursed from the same woman as you, the mothers of your wives, the daughters of your wives with whom you have consummated the marriage—if the marriage has not been consummated, you may marry the daughter. Also prohibited for you are the women who were married to your genetic sons. Also, you shall not be married to two sisters at the same time—but do not break up existing marriages.

Sounds like an exhaustive list—but it is not. It is the most lax incest prohibition in all of human culture. There is a massive omission: cousins only once removed. In the Muslim culture, marriage and breeding between first cousins has existed since day one. Mohammed himself married Zaynab, who was his father's sister's daughter. Mohammed and Zaynab were direct first cousins.

Marrying your first cousin is the genetic equivalent of marrying your half-sibling. Think of your own family. Let's say your dad has a sister, who is "Aunt Linda" to you. Your dad and Aunt Linda, being full siblings, have exactly the same genetic constitution. Their family trees prior to their generation are identical. Therefore, if Aunt Linda has any children, who are your first cousins, they are, in genetic terms, 50% identical to you. You share one of your two genetic constituencies with your cousins, thus making them genetically the same as a half-sibling would be.

First cousin marriage for just one generation is extremely risky in and of itself. This is why virtually every other culture on earth prohibits it, and treats it as a cultural taboo. When two people come together who carry so many similar genetic alleles, the chance of an undesirable recessive trait expressing itself in their offspring soars. Now, understanding that single-generational risk, understand that Muslims have been marrying their first cousins over and over again for 1,400 years. Sit in stillness for a moment with the full, terrifying gravity of this.

The Reproductive Health Journal reports the following rates on consanguinity in Muslim countries. Where a statistical range has been recorded, I have used the lower parameter:

Algeria: 22.6%
Bahrain: 39.4%
Egypt (North): 20.9%
Egypt (Nubia-South): 60.5%
Iraq: 47.0%
Jordan: 28.5%
Kuwait: 22.5%
Lebanon: 12.8%
Libya: 48.4%
Mauritania: 47.2%
Morocco: 19.9%
Oman: 56.3%
Palestine: 17.5%
Qatar: 54.0%
Saudi Arabia: 42.1%
Sudan: 44.2%
Syria: 30.3%
Tunisia: 20.1%
United Arab Emirates: 40.0%
Yemen: 40.0%

Muslim men are never, ever allowed to be around, see, converse with or otherwise interact with any females outside of their families. However, they are permitted to act as chaperones for their female first cousins. If your first cousin is the only person of the opposite sex you ever get to interact with, is it any surprise that Muslims are marrying their first cousins more as the rule than as the exception?

According to the BBC, 55% of Pakistani-Britons are married to a first cousin, and as a corollary to that produce "just under a third" of all children in the UK with genetic illnesses, despite being only 3% of the total births.

As a direct result of inbreeding, the Muslim population is the only population on earth that is mentally and physically devolving. This inherent weakness makes Muslim populations more susceptible to nefarious, oppressive leadership and mass manipulation. The amount of objective evidence supporting this statement is colossal and obvious.

But there is hope. All is not lost. In my education in animal husbandry, I was keenly interested in my genetics classes. One of the key concepts in farm animal genetics is "hybrid vigor." This is the genetic principle which states that the crossbreeding of two genetically diverse plants or animals of the same species yields offspring of increased vigor...^{*13}

Saving the American Dream

It was winter and the streets of Vienna were covered with snow. The plows were busy for most of the night, and I watched them go up and down the street. I couldn't sleep because earlier that day, I had had an interview at the American embassy that would determine whether I would be admitted into United States as a refugee. It was a long application process and it seemed like it was finally coming to an end in my favor.

The next morning, I bundled up and crossed the street to the nearest phone booth. I was making the call to find out the results of the interview. I was confident that I would receive a positive answer.

"I regret to tell you that your application has been rejected," said the voice on the other end.

I didn't answer back in hope that my silence would negate the words I just heard. Perhaps I was imagining it. After what seemed like an eternity, I said, "What do you mean? I don't understand."

The man on the other line simply repeated the same sentence but this time his words were kinder and almost apologetic.

"You can always try to appeal the decision," he continued. "You are allowed one appeal."

"Thank you for letting me know." It was all I could bring myself to say. I held back the tears but I could feel them in my throat. There it was: that godawful lump that didn't want to go away, a burden that descended upon me. I barely even looked at my mother and my four-year-old cousin, and I kept muttering,

They can't do this. They can't do this. Of course, they could and they did. But at the time, I really didn't pay attention to practical matters. I became disoriented and preoccupied with the snow. What at first seemed like a romantic image of a postcard from Vienna became an impediment to my vision—a cold and miserable inconvenience.

At that point in my life, I'd been living in a Czech refugee camp for three years. I'd survived the war in Bosnia, but as in the aftermath of any war, there wasn't much hope of having a productive life in a country so broken apart by war and genocide. I was 16 years old and I was determined to come to America, almost to the point of obsession. Following the advice of the man who delivered the bad news, I wrote my appeal and sent it to the American embassy in Vienna. I didn't have much hope, and I knew that if my appeal was rejected, it would mean the end of my hopes for coming to America. But the news that came back was positive and a few months later, my mother, my little cousin, and I made the long and uncertain trip to America.

I didn't know what could possibly await me here. As much as I always had a healthy dose of realism, the idealist in me couldn't help but think that all of my troubles would go away once I stepped onto American soil. But it was only the beginning of a great struggle, particularly in the first few years. My spirit was almost crushed when, not even a month after I came to America, my father died in Bosnia.

I was disappointed by my surroundings—the old and small apartment, dog pee stains and God knows what else on a worn out 1970s couch that should have been thrown out years ago, a mattress that was so worn out it could have passed as a water bed, and that awful scent of formaldehyde in the ancient kitchen cabinets. I yearned so badly to go back to my homeland. But I couldn't. The plane ticket that brought me to America had to be paid off, and we had $100 to our name.

I suppose I could have given up. But there was something so inherently American in my being that giving up was not an option. In spite of being surrounded by Americans who lacked ambition and instead relied on the collective to give them some meaning or identity, I knew implicitly that this did not represent true American character. It could not.

When I arrived in the United States in the late 1990s, I didn't notice any active hatred of America. My time in academia changed that. I couldn't help but notice an ideological movement, the main aim of which is the assertion of Marxist ideology and the annihilation of American principles. Even so, the anti-American rhetoric seemed confined largely to the ivory tower, and I didn't (or perhaps couldn't) see the subversive character of leftism as clearly as I do now.

Today, a globalist ideology has greatly contributed to a persistent attack on American identity. This is what I see every day, whether in academia or in the public square, and this is what leaves me feeling somewhat despondent and confused. How can someone who is born American harbor so much resentment against his own wonderful country? It's one thing to be a healthy critic who respects sober analysis about one's country. But I am talking about something different—insidious, corrosive, and ultimately destructive of the brilliant legacy of America's Founders to say nothing of freedom itself.

Genuine exploration of American identity has become an occasion for the American Left not only to criticize America's founding principles of but also to label patriots as "nativists" and "nationalists." Both terms, in the leftist mind, have negative connotations. According to the illogical principle of reductio ad Hitlerum, to have any national pride means that you're a goose-step away from full-blown Nazism. In the irrational streams of consciousness of the American Left, to love America is to be a racist and a bigot. It seems that the only acceptable way to discuss what it means to be American is to reject America's founding principles in favor of an inchoate and often incoherent idea of "progress." The Left often likes to say "dissent is the highest form of patriotism," but they never seem to want to ask or deliberate about what they are dissenting from. This so-called dissent is just subversive, Alinskyite agitation. No surprise then, that the fruit of their labor is chaos.

At the heart of American ethos is the American Dream: an expression of the call in the Declaration of Independence to honor our rights to "Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness." Yet the American Dream cannot be summed up in just those few words. Its particulars are different for everyone. Moreover, the Dream is not exclusive to those who choose to become American citizens, as so much of the propaganda today would have you believe. It is also, if not primarily, for American-born people. Whatever its specifics may be, we can certainly conclude that the Dream is an expression of individuality and freedom. The Left deny this Dream. They would call it an illusion. But in denying it, they take away the value of my choice to be here. Such a philosophy is no champion of immigrants. It makes a mockery of them.

For me, the escalating attack on America's founding principles is a palpable and visceral experience. I reflect on my life, particularly the 22 years since I came to America. I reflect on the war and oppression that I experienced, I observe the irrational behavior of the Left, and I am firm in my belief that the uniqueness and greatness of America must be defended. For those of us who have felt the heavy hand of oppression and dehumanization, it's clear that the restoration and preservation of American values is not only a philosophical but also a practical necessity, and that "the price of liberty is eternal vigilance." *14

Police Make Arrest in 2003 Case of Grooming Gang Victim Believed Ground Up and Sold as Kebab Meat

Charlene Downes, 14 at the time of her disappearance, was last seen in Blackpool in 2003 and is believed to have been not only murdered but that her killers disposed of her body by putting it into kebab meat at a local seaside kebab shop.

Police have said they believe Charlene may have been linked to grooming gangs in Blackpool and say that they discovered at least 60 underage girls had been sexually groomed at “honey pot” takeaways in the city. The Daily Telegraph reported in 2011 that these children had been targeted with food, drugs, and alcohol in return for sex in the city.

Fourteen years later, authorities now say they have arrested a 51-year-old man in connection with her disappearance only after Charlene’s parents were able to force police to examine CCTV footage that had been in storage for 12 years, the Daily Mail reports.

A spokesman for Lancashire Police released a statement after the arrest saying: “The man, aged 51, who lived in Blackpool at the time of Charlene’s disappearance, is currently in custody. Charlene was just 14 years old when she was last seen in Blackpool on Saturday, November 1, 2003. A £100,000 reward remains on offer for information leading to the conviction of her killer or killers.”

Charlene’s mother expressed outrage that the CCTV footage had been kept hidden for over a decade saying: “It is unbelievable that they have had that footage all those years and never used it. It is an absolute disgrace and an insult to the memory of my dead daughter.”

She added that if the footage were available sooner than the 2007 murder trial, which, due to police error, led to the acquittal of Funny Boyz kebab worker Ilyad Albattikh for murder and Mohammed Reveshi for disposal of Charlene’s body, may have turned out differently.

At the time of the trial, the court was told the fast food shop owner had “joked” Downes had been chopped up and put into kebabs that were sold to the public. After the acquittal, the two men were paid £250,000 in compensation.

Earlier this year, another kebab shop made headlines after it was revealed that a 16-year-old girl was brutally gang raped by multiple Afghan Muslim men.

Muslim grooming gangs also continue to plague the North of England, according to recent reports, in which police allege that the Yorkshire town of Keighley may be home to a new grooming scandal involving over 179 individual sex crimes.

The most infamous case of sexual abuse of young girls still remains that of Rotherham in which over 1,400 underage girls were systematically raped, tortured, and many forced into prostitution and addiction to drugs. The rapists remained at large for so long largely because police were too afraid of the backlash for mentioning the ethnic origins of the Muslim male perpetrators. ^{*15}

“You can ignore reality, but you can't ignore the consequences of ignoring reality.” —Ayn Rand

The Constitution's Original Preamble

We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

The phrase, "We the People of the United States," has been quoted ever since its adoption in 1788. But it was not in the original Preamble.

On August 7, the Committee of Detail submitted a tentative version of the Constitution. Here was the Preamble:

We the people of the States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia, do ordain, declare, and establish the following Constitution for the Government of Ourselves and Our Posterity.

There was a problem. This was not immediately recognized. The Preamble named all 13 states. But some of the states might not ratify it. Rhode Island was not expected to, and only barely did by a vote of 34 to 32: the last state to ratify.

The first Preamble, which affirmed the sovereignty of the sovereign people of specific states, might not apply. It would take only nine states to ratify in order to create a new government, in opposition to the Articles of Confederation, which required unanimity of all 13 legislatures.

On September 8, the Constitution was turned over to the Committee on Style and Arrangement. The Committee consisted of five men: Alexander Hamilton, William Johnson, Rufus King, James Madison, and Gouverneur Morris. As with the committee of five that was assigned the task of writing the Declaration of Independence, it assigned most of the work to one man: Morris. James Madison later wrote: "The finish given to the style and arrangement of the Constitution fairly belongs to the pen of Mr. Morris." Morris took 23 articles and converted them into seven. He also completely rewrote the Preamble. It took him three days. The Committee presented its work on September 12.

The Preamble moved the locus of sovereignty from the states to the nation as a whole. This became the declaration of dependence: dependence on a geographically rootless nation. This is what outraged Patrick Henry at the Virginia ratifying convention:

And here I would make this enquiry of those worthy characters who composed a part of the late Federal Convention. I am sure they were fully impressed with the necessity of forming a great consolidated Government, instead of a confederation. That this is a consolidated Government is demonstrably clear, and the danger of such a Government, is, to my mind, very striking. I have the highest veneration of those Gentlemen,—but, Sir, give me leave to demand, what right had they to say, We, the People. My political curiosity, exclusive of my anxious solicitude for the public welfare, leads me to ask who authorised them to speak the language of, We, the People, instead of We, the States? States are the characteristics, and the soul of a confederation. If the States be not the agents of this compact, it must be one great consolidated National Government of the people of all the States.

He lost the vote. The Constitution was ratified by all 13 states. So, the original Preamble could have been kept in. That would have changed the rhetoric of nationalism ever since...^{*16}

Only Trump Can Unify America

All of the little demons are coming out against Trump. Their heyday is coming to a close with Obama's presidency, as Trump's approaches. Donald Trump is uniquely able to unite America because he exposes the divisions and phoniness in America, left and right. Trump has the clear-thinking courage to deal with our problems directly. No other presidential candidate comes close to addressing the hatred and lies collapsing America.

The longer you wait to address a problem, the tougher the measures you have to use. When evil is allowed, it grows. When you let a bully group get away with spreading mess, the evil that drives it is emboldened. The weak responses of "decent" people have allowed wickedness to build movements of hate and lies, such as Black Lives Matter, Muslim activists, Copwatch groups, Occupy Wall Street and phony "peaceful protesters" who are really agitators and propagandists providing cover for rioters and criminals, promoting hatred, blame and lies against Trump, America, police and whites. Blinded by anger, Trump's hard truth feels like hate to them, while emotional lies feel like love.

You must get tough with a bully. If you have to, you beat up a bully. The bully learns he can't mess with you. The bully stops. This is a man's game. The other Republicans are playing it like women—and losing. You cannot always play nice, by manmade rules of "civility." Even Jesus name-called with the truth.

Where was effective conservative censure against Obama for this division that he exacerbated at every opportunity the past eight years? Because he was black and feigned decorum, they played along powerlessly. For all of Obama's highly inappropriate meddling and, in Ted Cruz's description, "lawlessness," where were the serious calls for impeachment by our elected representatives? They're either cowards or they are blind and agree with Obama. Barack Obama has divided the country with lies and wicked insinuations about whites, authorities, Republicans, Christians and men. To their shame, Americans failed to counter in a big way with a unifying message of truth—until Trump.

Breitbart reported that a Black Lives Matter agitator (who refused to come on my radio show) posted an anti-police gear list instructing agitators to spray paint the visors of police helmets and windshields of their armored trucks, blocking their vision and hindering their movement. This is evil. These angry "protesters" cannot interpret reality because they are spiritually blind. So they may think they are being attacked and take that as an excuse to assault and endanger police and others around them, and vandalize our property out of their own ignorance and false judgment.

The rioters' instructions were posted in Arabic and English. Black Lives Matter and Occupy Wall Street are both supporters of Palestinian terrorists Hamas, anti-Israel haters who use children as human shields.

Black Lives Matter promised to "shut down" the Republican National Convention this summer in Cleveland. We can only hope for a proper response if Trump is in charge.

The Black Lives Matter agitators also suggested rioters carry "a rose so we can show that we can do as we ought to and join together in the most peaceful way possible." This is fake love, showing false peace and pure propaganda.

Conservative media outlet Progressives Today showed anti-Trump "protesters" shouting "F— Trump" at families entering Trump Tower in Chicago—with children around. The angry mockers cried about made-up things like "racism, sexism, Islamophobia, xenophobia." They are fear-mongering about Trump, but accusing him of being the fear monger.

At a campaign rally in Virginia, as with most rallies he's put on, Trump was interrupted multiple times by agitators. After offensive chants of "Black Lives Matter" (as if anyone other than liberals don't know), Trump answered with "All Lives Matter." Trump said we will unify the country—that we have big problems that people don't comprehend. Trump said he could talk with some protesters—but some are looking for trouble, and we have to be tough and swift.

Evil is used to getting its way under Obama's wicked leadership, and under the failure to lead on the part of weak Christians, Republicans and most white men. Now that one white Christian Republican man, Donald Trump, is finally standing up—like crabs in a bucket, the losers are trying to drag Trump down and blame him for the anger and disturbance of peace that has brewed for eight years and longer, that they ignored and failed to address. Conservatives attacking Trump for speaking the truth freely without fear are like the blind blacks attacking me for speaking the truth freely without anger.

Fiery preachers were instrumental in first uniting America and bringing about our independence. Today, most preachers live in their hell of useless fear and anger. Evil wants to drag us into darkness through temptation, intimidation and rage. If whites don't start correcting blacks, they will continue to become like them, just as Republicans have become like Democrats, Christians like the world, and men like women and children. If men don't start leading, America will continue to fall apart in its downward slide. *17

"I can remember when Americans weren't afraid of everything." —Anonymous Canadian

*The problem is not guns. It's hearts without God. Homes without discipline.
Schools without prayer, and courts without justice.*

Prof Greet Incoming Class of Precious Snowflakes with Speech Crushing Their PC Beliefs

Mike Adams, a professor at the University of North Carolina-Wilmington is not your stereotypical left-wing teacher. On the heels of a report that showed that liberal arts professors overwhelmingly support Democrats, Adams' semester-opening statement to his students has gone viral.

First printed in Townhall in late August, over the last few days it has been reprinted multiple times.

[Trigger warning: The following is extraordinarily insensitive and its candor may cause some students to be highly offended. Symptoms of being confronted with viewpoints other than one's own may cause one to get "the vapors" and students have even been known to collapse in a fainting spell upon reading offensive literature. Reader discretion is advised.]

Here is what he said to his students:

Welcome back to class, students! I am Mike Adams your criminology professor here at UNC-Wilmington. Before we get started with the course I need to address an issue that is causing problems here at UNCW and in higher education all across the country. I am talking about the growing minority of students who believe they have a right to be free from being offended. If we don't reverse this dangerous trend in our society there will soon be a majority of young people who will need to walk around in plastic bubble suits to protect them in the event that they come into contact with a dissenting viewpoint. That mentality is unworthy of an American. It's hardly worthy of a Frenchman.

Let's get something straight right now. You have no right to be unoffended. You have a right to be offended with regularity. It is the price you pay for living in a free society. If you don't understand that you are confused and dangerously so. In part, I blame your high school teachers for failing to teach you basic civics before you got your diploma. Most of you went to the public high schools, which are a disaster. Don't tell me that offended you. I went to a public high school.

Of course, your high school might not be the problem. It is entirely possible that the main reason why so many of you are confused about free speech is that piece of paper hanging on the wall right over there. Please turn your attention to that ridiculous document that is framed and hanging by the door. In fact, take a few minutes to read it before you leave class today. It is our campus speech code. It specifically says that there is a requirement that everyone must only engage in discourse that is "respectful." That assertion is as ludicrous as it is illegal. I plan to have that thing ripped down from every classroom on campus before I retire.

One of my grandfathers served in World War I. My step-grandfather served in World War II. My sixth great grandfather enlisted in the American Revolution when he was only thirteen. These great men did not fight so we could simply relinquish our rights to the enemy within our borders. That enemy is the Marxists who run our public universities. If you are a Marxist and I just offended you, well, that's tough. I guess they don't make communists like they used to.

Unbelievably, a student once complained to the Department chairwoman that my mention of God and a Creator was a violation of Separation of Church and State. Let me be as clear as I possibly can: If any of you actually think that my decision to paraphrase the Declaration of Independence in the course syllabus is unconstitutional then you suffer from severe intellectual hernia.

Indeed, it takes hard work to become stupid enough to think the Declaration of Independence is unconstitutional. If you agree with the student who made that complaint then you are probably just an anti-religious zealot. Therefore, I am going to ask you to do exactly three things and do them in the exact order that I specify.

First, get out of my class. You can fill out the drop slip over at James Hall. Just tell them you don't believe in true diversity and you want to be surrounded by people who agree with your twisted interpretation of the Constitution simply because they are the kind of people who will protect you from having your beliefs challenged or your feelings hurt.

Second, withdraw from the university. If you find that you are actually relieved because you will no longer be in a class where your beliefs might be challenged then you aren't ready for college. Go get a job building houses so you can work with some illegal aliens who will help you gain a better appreciation of what this country has to offer.

Finally, if this doesn't work then I would simply ask you to get the hell out of the country. The ever-growing thinned-skinned minority you have joined is simply ruining life in this once-great nation. Please move to some place like Cuba where you can enjoy the company of communists and get excellent health care. Just hop on a leaky boat and start paddling your way towards utopia. You will not be missed.

Earlier this year, Adams won a court victory against the school, when he sued, asserting that he was not promoted due to his outspoken conservatism. *¹⁸

From This Point Forward, Christians Are Going To Be Banned From Holding Many Jobs In America

Christianity is being criminalized in the United States. No, I am not talking about the kind of Christianity that is so prevalent in America today where "Christians" just ignore what the Bible says and do whatever they wanted to do in the first place anyway. Rather, I am talking about the kind of faith that Kim Davis has demonstrated. Christians all over this country are being put into positions where they must choose to either submit to the "new morality" or potentially lose their jobs. For Kim Davis, deciding to take a stand meant that she was thrown into prison. The radical judge that threw her into prison has said that she will stay there until she is willing to change her mind.

The pace of which our nation is circling the toilet is absolutely breathtaking. Just eleven years ago, a state constitutional amendment that banned gay marriage in Kentucky received support from 75 percent of the voters.

Now, Kim Davis has been locked away, and more county clerks may be next. There is news that another county clerk named Casey Davis has stepped forward to say that he won't issue any same sex marriage licenses either.

What in the world has happened to America? We live in a country where Christians are being imprisoned for what they believe, but Planned Parenthood is free to slaughter babies, chop them up, and sell off their parts to the highest bidder.

We better start paying attention. What is happening right in front of our eyes is eerily reminiscent of what happened in Nazi Germany...

Rowan County Clerk Kim Davis entered her fourth day as an inmate at the Carter County Detention Center Sunday, after refusing to license gay marriage. About 300 people gathered on the lawn outside the jail to support her Saturday, chanting "thank you, Kim" and waving signs that said "Kim Davis for President" and "God gives his hardest battles to his strongest soldiers."

Davis was held in contempt of court and jailed on Thursday for refusing to issue marriage licenses to same-sex couples, despite being ordered to do so several times by the courts.

Mathew Staver, Davis's chief legal counsel, compared her persecution to that of Jews faced in Nazi Germany. Staver told the radio show "Crosstalk" Wednesday, "[Davis is] there to do a duty, a job and the job duty was changed. Does that mean that if you're Christian, don't apply here? ... What happened in Nazi Germany, what happened there first, they removed the Jews from government public employment, then they stopped patronizing them in their private businesses, then they continued to stigmatize them, then they were the 'problems,' then they killed them."

In the future, Bible-believing Christians are going to be completely disqualified from being county clerks or holding any other government position that deals with marriage.

But it won't stop there. Ultimately, any Christians that will not go along with the new morality will be labeled a "bigot" and a "hater" and will essentially become unemployable.

If you don't believe me, just consider what happened to the CEO of Mozilla. He was extremely good at his job, but he was forced out when it was revealed that he had once donated $1,000 to a group that supported Proposition 8. It didn't matter that 52 percent of Californians actually voted in favor of Proposition 8. He broke "the code", and so he was not fit to run a major tech corporation.

By extension, that means that no Bible-believing Christian is fit to run a major tech corporation.

And if you are a Christian, don't think about a career as a high ranking military official either. According to a startling BuzzFeed report, Barack Obama actually told the top military officers in this nation that they could either support the end of Don't Ask, Don't Tell or they could resign...

In a meeting with the heads of the five service branches in 2010, President Obama offered the leaders a choice: Support my efforts to end the military's Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy, or resign, the Commandant of the Coast Guard said.

In a video obtained by BuzzFeed via a Freedom of Information Act request, Coast Guard Commandant Adm. Robert Papp revealed that Obama was unwilling to compromise with service leaders over DADT during a meeting in 2010. "We were called into the Oval Office and President Obama looked all five service chiefs in the eye and said, 'This is what I want to do.' I cannot divulge everything he said to us, that's private communications within the Oval Office, but if we didn't agree with it—if any of us didn't agree with it—we all had the opportunity to resign our commissions and go do other things," he said.

Are you starting to get the picture?

It is becoming unacceptable to be a Bible-believing Christian in America, and it is only going to get worse in the years ahead. The following is what Carl Gallups, the author of "Be Thou Prepared", had to say about this in a recent piece for WND...

The imprisonment of Kim Davis won't be the end of the insanity infecting America. We have been given over to a depraved mind, and the travesty inflicted upon this brave believer is unprecedented in American history as far as I know. I do not believe that anyone, public official or private citizen, has ever been jailed simply because of his or her firmly held faith-belief that marriage is between a man and a woman and not between two men or two women.

This is how it starts. In television shows and movies, Bible-believing Christians are being relentlessly mocked. Laws are being passed that are slowly marginalizing believers and that are trying to force us to accept things that we simply cannot accept. And even now, many employers will not even think of hiring you if they discover that you are a committed follower of Jesus Christ.

And just like in Nazi Germany, eventually the persecution becomes more overt and more violent. On Saturday, a non-denominational church in New York was firebombed...

Police in New York are investigating after a firebomb was thrown inside of a door at a non-denominational church on Saturday.

The incident occurred early Saturday morning at approximately 5:30 a.m. as a yet unidentified suspect threw a Molotov cocktail threw a glass door at the Chapel at Crosspoint in Getzville. The explosive then started a fire in the vestibule, which set off the sprinkler system and flooded the entryway.

The Getzville Fire Department and the Amherst Police Department responded to the four-alarm incident, according to assistant Police Chief Charles Cohen.

The culture is turning radically against us, and what we have seen so far is just the beginning.

So are you willing to give up your job, your future and potentially even your freedom for your faith? *¹⁹

"Does anyone seriously believe that people who are prepared to defy the laws against murder are going to obey laws against owning guns or large-capacity magazines?"—Thomas Sowell

"Our Constitution was made only for a moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other." —John Adams

"The secret in life is to have no fear." —Fela Anikulapo Kuti

Jesus

Practiced and promoted...

- Tolerance
 - Forgiveness
 - Non violence
 - Unselfish love
 - Self-sacrifice
- ...and warned of 'false prophets'

Muhammad

Practiced and promoted...

- Warfare & violence
- Hatred
- Intolerance
- Misogyny
- Oppression
- Paedophilia

THE STATE OF THE WORLD

IN JUST ONE PICTURE

The Post-Modern Assault On The West

“Modernity” is the name for the profound cultural transformation which saw the rise of representative democracy, the age of science, of reason over superstition. It has given us the Industrial Revolution and has provided more wealth and stability than any other societal system. It has provided health care for the masses along with accessible education to all.

At its core, it values empowered the individual to think, believe, read, write, speak, doubt, question, argue, and refute any ideas at all in pursuit of truth. What is there not to like?

We find ourselves offered an alternative upon which progressive thinkers bill themselves as the only true defenders of Social Justice and moral progress. They call themselves Modern.

They are not.

As Johnathan Rauch, the American Author and journalist said “utopianism and perfectionism, however well intended, should never displace reasonable caution in making social policy... It’s much easier to damage society... than to repair it.”

The progressive left has aligned itself not with Modernity but with postmodernism, which rejects objective truth as a fantasy dreamed up by naive and/or arrogantly bigoted thinker.

Taking the left alternative, into “Social Justice” world, and you’ll find the objectionable notion that truth is “situated” in identity, which leads to the belief that truth is relative to whatever one’s cultural background has traditionally held it to be—unless that culture is considered to have unfairly dominated in the past, in which case anything it holds to be true must be refuted as a lie.

If this sounds confusing, do not worry. Well educated representatives have appointed themselves along this path to decide who can say what to whom and under what circumstances.

You need only to check your privileges in life, fall in line, become an “ally,” shut up, and listen to those deemed more oppressed than you are. The shutting up is particularly important. It’s almost impossible to avoid being a problem if you are speaking independently and engaging in some free thinking. You probably won’t like being told you are evil and responsible for the worlds collective problems, but according to the mantra (about which you will be regularly reminded) there are those less privileged in the world and they like their oppression (and you) even less...

You will also notice that the chief commodity here is hysterical moral panic and an absolute intolerance of thinking differently Postmodernism, despite insisting to the contrary, is bent toward authoritarianism and a value system at odds with Modernity.

These Postmodernists make up a relatively small, intrinsically divided, but alarmingly powerful minority. Not least because they have the support of the Mainstream Media.

The philosophical underpinnings of anti-modernism are post-modernism (left).

Postmodernism is a set of ideas from the 1960's, rooted in the works of French theorists including Jean-François Lyotard, Jean Baudrillard, and Jacques Derrida.

It has been adapted and further politicized within the fields of inter-sectional feminism, critical race theory, post-colonialism, and queer theory and manifested to various degrees in left-wing policies and Social Justice activism.

Although the founding fathers of post-modernism claimed to be continuing the Modernity project by breaking down oppressive power structures they were in fact, replacing them with their own versions.

They treat truth, as we know selectively, using only the portion of the whole truth which supports their moral ambitions. Anyone who has watched BBC Question Time, or indeed pretty much anything the BBC pumps out over the last 30 years or so, can verify this. Who could forget the recent assertion that the Roman empire was multicultural? (Conveniently forgetting they had slaves who were not citizens until they had earned freedom.)

The skill with which the anti-modernists are able to conquer and co-opt political movements on their side is a huge contributor to the problem. Postmodern extremists have co-opted the left-wing Women's March, for example, and Pride UK is currently under great pressure from the same groups to ban criticism of Islamic homophobia. The vast majority of the education movement is unashamedly left leaning and actively instil their message of progress in young impressionable minds.

Now I am not saying that everything that happened in the Modern period is without its faults. There has been war, genocide, imperialism, and slavery to name a few. It needs to be kept in context, to value the intellectual shift which produced benefits that had not existed before or had been lost in the Medieval period. You are pro-Modernity if you believe in the scientific method, human rights, individual liberty, and established thinking based on evidence and reason.

The principles of Modernity are a set of values that served to lift us out of the Medieval period and into the dramatically improved world we mostly take for granted today. These defining values include :

- A profound respect for the reason and the utility and the strength of science
- An unwavering commitment to the norms of society, including rule of law, and an abiding belief that they are the most beneficent political force the world has known;
- An understanding that the base of society to be defended and cherished is the individual and the family unit
- An appreciation that Good is best achieved through a balance between human cooperation and competition.

Despite being unbelievably popular, these principles are currently under threat.

Support for the genuine scientific thinking, human rights, representative democracy, individual liberty, and arguments based on evidence and reason, as well as for the institutions which protect and develop them, is overwhelming. But we must speak up. Be seen.

We must promote and support these values explicitly, engage with society and our current political situation in these terms. In this way, the defenders of Modernity can unite to help society climb down from its existential polarization, marginalize those anti-modernist fringes, and continue to grow. If we don't, the fate of the Roman Empire may await us. ^{*20}

Before 1934, any child could order
this machine gun by mail

Number of school shooting
prior to 1934: ZERO.

Teenagers are the New “Front” of the Lunatic Mob That Wants to Overthrow Your Country and Trample Your Freedoms

As this elaborate theater unfolds across the stage of the fake news media, keep your wits about you. We are all being subjected to an elaborate, engineered “psyop” campaign (psychological operations) with an insidious end goal: The complete destruction of the Constitution, the Bill of Rights and the democratic outcome of the 2016 election.

You are being told that inexperienced teenagers can solve all our problems... if we would only listen to them with our hearts! Indeed, if we only agreed to be completely disarmed by a corrupt, totalitarian government, we would all be “saved” by liberalism... just like Venezuela, North Korea, communist China or the former Soviet Union, I suppose.

Sadly, no one has yet told these teenagers like David Hogg that he is being used in exactly the same way the Nazis used the “Hitler Youth” to promote statist propaganda in conjunction with state-run media. David Hogg, sadly, is too young and uninformed to realize he’s being exploited by nefarious, anti-liberty forces that ultimately “eat their own” once they achieve their goal of a violent mass murder revolution. It is the Hogg of history who have ended up discarded as “useless puppets” after they’ve served their purpose for the regime... ²¹

Can you spot the difference? They both support Common Core,
Amnesty, Obamacare, NSA spying.

Neither can I. We can do better than this in 2016.

Guys,

I was an audio engineer in the 80's and handled microphones for both bands and talk shows. The odd nasal noises and breathing ticks that you hear on Trump's sound tracks and audio are because the engineer handling his audio feed had the compression ratio turned all the way up on his mic and the reaction time delayed so that in pauses between speech, the mic gain would be so high that it would pick up any noises and cadence ticks before the triggered limiter/expander closed off the mic when the sound dropped below the set silence threshold.

It was obviously done on purpose since it's a very simple fix to not have that happen. Hope that helps understand why Trump's mic and audio feed sounded that way.

-John

HEADLINES: THINK THE MEDIA GOT THE MEMO?
The Washington Post	"In acceptance speech, Trump's America is a dark and desperate place"
CBS NEWS	"Donald Trump offers dark vision of America in GOP convention speech"
NBC NEWS	"Donald Trump Takes America on a Journey to the Dark Side"
CNBC	"Trump's emotional and dark message: How it will play out"
Rolling Stone	"Watch Donald Trump's Dark , Fear-Mongering RNC Speech"
THE HUFFINGTON POST	"Donald Trump's Dark And Scary Night"
Mother Jones	"Donald Trump and the Dark Soul of the GOP"
THE NEW YORKER	"Donald Trump's Dark , Dark Convention Speech"
THE Nation.	"Donald Trump's Angry, Dark Convention Speech Caps Off a Disastrous RNC "
The Boston Globe	"The dark , frightening America of Donald Trump "

BAT-WIELDING THUG TAKES OFF

Trump emerges from limo much like the one he jumped out of to
HARRY HAMBURG DAILY NEWS

Mugger's Trumped

Donald stops attack

By JAMES ROSEN

Daily News Staff Writer

Call it The Donald to The Rescue.

When he saw "a big guy with a big bat" bashing another fellow, Donald Trump did what any self-respecting billionaire would do: He ordered his driver to pull over.

"I'm not looking to play this thing up," Trump said yesterday. "I'm surprised you found out about it."

Witnesses said Trump, with Marla Maples tugging at his arm to try to stop him, leaped from his black stretch limousine Monday evening during the assault on Ninth Ave. near 45th St.

Brutal-looking

"Someone in the car looked over and said, 'Gee, look at that, it's a mugging,'" Trump said. "I said to my driver to stop the car because it was brutal-looking."

Trump was at first reluctant to discuss his daredevil deed, but then he warmed to the task.

"The guy with the bat looked at me, and I said, 'Look, you've gotta stop this. Put down the bat,'" Trump said. "I guess he recognized me because he said, 'Mr. Trump, I didn't do anything wrong.' I said, 'How could you not do anything wrong when you're whacking a guy with a bat?' Then he ran away."

Trump said the incident occurred at 8 p.m. as he, Maples and another couple were heading toward the Lincoln Tunnel on their way to the Meadowlands for a Paula Abdul concert.

Kathleen Romeo, a 16-year-old student at St. Michael's Academy...

in Manhattan, said cries of "There's Trump!" went through the crowd of onlookers.

"A lot of people were surprised that he got out to see what was happening," Romeo said, adding that the bat-wielder ran off just before Trump actually appeared and that Trump, "just looked around and went back into his limo."

But another witness, who asked not to be identified, said, "There was a guy with a bat, hitting a guy over the head, and Trump yelled, 'Put that bat down. What are you doing?' The guy dropped the bat, came over and started talking to him."

Trump said the bat-man delivered at least "five or six good whacks" before Trump interceded.

Trump said he left the site only after he saw a man who appeared to be a doctor treating the victim and heard that an ambulance was on its way.

Police said the attack was not reported.

The incident may have been a karmic sequel to the Oct. 31 mugging of Trump's mother, Mary, whose attacker was chased...

Election 2016 Numbers: Trump Won Both as of Nov., 13th ^{*22}

Final #Election2016 numbers

#PopularVote: #Trump: 62,972,226 #Clinton:
62,277,750

#ElectoralCollege vote #Trump 306 #Clinton
232

Sources

- *1 = <https://xkcd.com/927/>
- *2 = http://www.unicusmagazine.com/html/ArchonB_Day.htm
- *3 = <https://web.archive.org/web/20120116225929/http://www.lloydpye.com:80/fightthetupids.htm>
- *4 = <http://www.newsweek.com/2016/06/17/silicon-valley-takeover-468182.html>
- *5 = <https://www.businessinsider.com/commodities-needed-to-support-americans-2013-12>
- *6 = <https://canadafreepress.com/article/housebreaking-your-new-euro-snob>
- *7 = <http://bonkersworld.net/mobile-relationship>
- *8 = <https://www.futuristgerd.com/2015/11/26/good-read-on-the-addictive-power-of-apps-and-the-net-in-general/>
- *9 = <http://hijacked.com.au/inside-bush-doof-culture>
- *10 = <https://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-4791246/Missing-woman-Lisa-Theris-alive-month-woods.html>
- *11 = <https://www.linkedin.com/pulse/k-12-short-history-u-educational-failure-bruce-deitrick-price/>
- *12 = <https://www.deviantart.com/berthjan/art/Omega-Code-117665568>
- *13 = https://www.americanthinker.com/articles/2011/04/the_keystone_of_the_islamic_mi.html
- *14 = <https://amgreatness.com/2018/07/15/saving-the-american-dream/>
- *15 = <https://www.breitbart.com/london/2017/08/02/police-make-arrest-decade-old-case-teen-girl-killed-body-put-kebab-meat/>
- *16 = <https://www.garynorth.com/public/15367.cfm>
- *17 = <https://www.wnd.com/2016/03/only-trump-can-unify-america/>
- *18 = <https://web.archive.org/web/20151106210031/http://www.ijreview.com/2015/11/462474-prof-greets-incoming-class-of-precious-snowflakes-with-speech-crushing-every-one-of-their-pc-beliefs/>
- *19 = <http://endoftheamericandream.com/archives/from-this-point-forward-christians-are-going-to-be-banned-from-holding-many-jobs-in-america>
- *20 = <https://polnewsnetwork.com/2017/09/06/post-modern-assault-west/>
- *21 = <http://the-trumpet-online.com/select-school-shooting-survivors-new-front-lunatic-mob-wants-overthrow-country-trample-freedoms/>
- *22 = https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_lk8-M5XZR4

This research paper was created without commercial intent—all materials were discovered online.

Acknowledgments

To all uncredited authors (Sources), whose work was sampled for compilation into this document:

Thank you.

God

The All that IS.

Donate

Yearly

AISF welcomes non-tax deductible donations to continue spiritual research and fund development of a Light in Life™ Online app, to enable guides and users to measure their Self-healing progress.

Donate via PayPal (if/when research helps you) or Yearly (contributing to the foundation's future).

Contact

 PDF Documents may be freely shared/copied only if preserved entirely/unedited. © All IS Foundation, 2018.*