The Secret History of 9/11

For the first time in nearly a year, a 9/11 investigator has revealed highly classified information on the real events of 9/11, not a terror attack, but rather a nuclear attack on the United States, not a surprise at all, but one the US had expected, one predicted by a former American president and one purposefully ignored by President Clinton and quite probably facilitated by George W. Bush, who certainly empowered the cover up.

As early as 1996, insiders including former President George H.W. Bush, knew America was susceptible to nuclear terrorism. This was “The Sum of All Fears” just as depicted in the film, stolen nukes, planted beneath an iconic target, but those involved were certainly not terrorists.

Let's be perfectly clear, were one to watch today's news and not suspect that the US created and has run Al Qaeda since the onset, one might be operating with something less than a full deck of cards.

What changes things now is that, with the override of Obama's veto by congress last week, Saudi Arabia can be sued for complicity in 9/11. There is and has been evidence of Saudi Arabian involvement, even in the limited false narrative published in the 2005 9/11 report or the supposed missing “28 pages.”

... The Story Begins:`

Back in May 2014, VT received files from the real 9/11 investigation by the US Department of Energy. For those who are unaware, the DOE manufactures nuclear weapons under the innocent guise of a public utility sounding name.

Working with them, beginning on 9/12, was the International Atomic Energy Agency, part of the UN, whose investigators were in New York at the United Nations that fateful day. They picked up their Geiger counters, donned their yellow hard hats and their “Con Ed” (the power company for the City of New York) ID badges and yellow vests and began tracking the ionizing radiation signatures and taking soil samples.

Deep Background

The story began as one of nuclear proliferation, allegedly by Israel, ignored by the Clinton administration. You see, during the warming of relationships between the US and Russia, START (Strategic Arms Limitations Treaties) agreements forced the US to dismantle thousands of nuclear warheads.

The ones that came apart first were those that were oldest with plutonium cores that had converted to dangerous levels of PU240. These weapons were taken out of stockpiles, based on the date of manufacture of the cores. There were multiple reasons for this:

- Oldest manufactured, most plutonium decay
- Cores manufactured together would be removed, numbered and stockpiled for potential remanufacture, predicated on core from the same lot (i.e. “May 2, 1984 HANFORD 7”) representing a reserve ready to reconfigure and return to service.

You see, these lists, which cores matched which, fell into hands of an American ally, Israel. Then the cores began to disappear from the Pantex disassembly and storage facility in Amarillo, TX, not randomly, but in matched pairs, confirmation that these secret lists had been compromised, or had been asserted by our source, that Tom Countryman, who had access to the lists, had turn them over to Israel.

Former US President, George Herbert Walker Bush, from his offices on Memorial Drive in Houston TX, hired a team of investigators to look into what William Jefferson Clinton would not, perhaps because of his compromised position vis-a-vis Monica Lewinsky or some other shortcoming.

Bush hired CIA agent Roland Carnaby and Physicist and IAEA inspector Jeff Smith. Aiding them was John Wheeler III, a White House consultant and, with the FBI, John O'Neill.

Carnaby is dead, shot by police during a Houston traffic stop. Smith, with VT today, is under gag order by the secret Houston 9/11 grand jury, that sits on so much evidence, created by Michael Chertoff and John Ashcroft, tasked by Bush (43) with ending any potentially fruitful 9/11 inquiry.

John Wheeler was found in a Delaware trash dump and John O'Neill died on 9/11.

ABOVE: "WHEN THEIR REPORT WAS NOT MADE PUBLIC, THE TEAM RELEASED THE HIGHLY CLASSIFIED PHOTOGRAPHS SHOWING THE HUGE NUCLEAR CRATER WITH MELTED SWIRLS OF GRANITE BEDROCK. THE FIRST NUCLEAR EXPLOSION TURNED THE NEVADA DESERT TO GLASS. JET FUEL CANNOT DO THIS, NEITHER CAN NANOTHERMITE."

Add to all these signs, the molten metal in the footprints of WTC 1, 2, and 7 that for three months could not be extinguished by water or daily soil changes as it consumed concrete, steel, glass, office combustibles. The increasing incidence of radiation-only cancers from residents is another tell-tale sign of a nuclear "event." There were also aerial photographs of steam "upwellings" that were pouring out of street gratings two and three blocks south of the WTC, or ground zero.

Then there is the extraordinary high temperatures (800-1,300° f) of the WTC's surface heat after 9/11. It was recorded on September 16, 2001 by NASA's thermal-sensitive cameras in aerial photographs shot at 6,500 feet. Those data were reflected in the unusually lengthy period—September 11 to December 19—it took for extinguishing the pools of molten metals in basement levels of all three skyscrapers. In fact, the hottest surface places recorded on the "pile" by September 16 were WTC 1 (1,376° f), WTC 2 (1,134° f), and WTC 7 (1160° f).

Steel toes would often heat up and become intolerable. This heat was also a concern for the search-and-rescue dogs used at the site. Many were not outfitted with protective booties. More than one suffered serious injuries and at least three died while working at ground zero.

Instead of heat subsiding within a week, as is generally the case for major fires, the astronomically elevated heat levels remained for three months. Cleanup vendor Bechtel corporation—with 40 employees at the pile—issued this comment about working conditions:

“The debris pile at ground zero was always tremendously hot. Thermal measurements taken by helicopter each day showed underground temperatures ranging from 400°f to more than 2,800°f. The surface was so hot that standing too long in one spot softened (and even melted) the soles of our safety shoes.”

The Houston based team hired by GHW Bush began tracing missing nuclear pits, now numbering over 300. They found massive record keeping discrepancies between military decommissioning records and DOE transfer records. None matched or even came close. Most records were gone.

More than a thousand pits may have disappeared but 350 is the confirmed number reported to former President GHW Bush by his investigators in 1998. They were traced as having left the Pantex facility in refrigeration trucks where they were transferred to a fertilizer plant in West TX.

In 2013, this facility suffered a catastrophic accident.

During the investigation of the missing pits, Jeff Smith traced them through the Port of Houston to the Canary Islands and to the African nation of Mauritania where they were stored in an iron mine controlled by South African extremists working closely with Israel.

These same South Africans, in 1975, signed a treaty with Israel to develop weapons. On September 22, 1979, they exploded their first nuclear weapon off St. Edwards Island south of Capetown. They also developed extensive biological and chemical warfare weapons under the guidance of a Dr. Woulter Basson, a cardiologist, who developed some of the most dangerous biological weapons known to man.

South Africa developed 10 Hiroshima type (gun type) nuclear weapon until the program was dismantled, beginning in 1991, supervised by Dr. David Kelly and his young assistant, David Cameron. Kelly was later found dead of suspected suicide and Cameron found, even more mysteriously, ruling Britain as prime minister...

This is how nuclear arsenals in a half dozen or more non-nuclear states like Saudi Arabia, Taiwan and South Korea came into being...

The original team had been headed by John O’Neill, who had been tasked with hunting down Osama bin Laden but, in doing so, had stumbled on something very different going on, something he learned while working in Yemen. We believe he learned that bin Laden had been traveling in and out of the US, something we have confirmed, and that up to 9/11, bin Laden was actively employed by the CIA.

There are no active records of O’Neill working with Able Danger in Fort Lee, other than our direct contact with his coworkers on that assignment who claim he was forced out, publicly accused of misplacing classified information, later recovered.

Questions survive, such as why was there no attempt to deal with the nuclear threat? There had been a story passed around during the late 1990s that Israel had been storing nuclear material, perhaps even weapons, at its consulate in New York. In 2007/8 this story began moving around the internet but never in relation to 9/11.

This We Do Know

We know that specialized nuclear devices suitable for use in this type of scenario had been designed by a team at the Los Alamos National Laboratories, weapons that left little or no residual radiation unless, as was the case after 9/11, water was poured onto ground zero to cool the massive underground fires caused by melted steel mixed with liquefied granite in the form of magma, which persisted until January 2002.

We have not been able to confirm this team as being part of the nuclear conspiracy but we have confirmed that the team leader was a primary proponent of the absurd “nano-thermite” theory of detonation.

We also know that a grand jury seated in Houston actively silences all involved in Able Danger, that being the very few who survived the series of “accidents” and other mishaps. All are under threat of imprisonment for violating the Patriot Act if information revealing US government complicity in 9/11 is revealed.

A key and highly confirmed aspect of this story is the ravaged American nuclear arsenal. That documentation is “out there” as is evidence of the use of nuclear weapons by Israel, the US and others on almost two dozen occasions since 1945, according to top level sources at the International Atomic Energy Agency...<sup>*2</sup>

Sedition: The crime of saying, writing, or doing something that encourages people to disobey their government
—Merriam-Webster

Leftists' hatred for conservatives is nothing new, but they've seriously ramped up their violent protests since the election of President Donald Trump. What's setting them off?

The left hates God, and it hates real men who display Godly authority. For leftist males, the contrast between President Trump's strength and their weakness is just too painful. For leftist females, the president represents the masculine force that limits their irrational excesses, such as their hell-bent desire to kill unborn children.

Though they deflect by calling the president a liar, leftist males and females are really angry because Mr. Trump is fulfilling his campaign promises to restore order.

Due to their seething hatred for all that is good, most leftists do not have the creative energy to actually build things; they only have enough power to tear down what is good. This is why Barack Obama was so successful in undoing the U.S. health care system, nearly collapsing the U.S. economy, weakening the military, and breaking down trust between police and citizens. Obama and the Democrats in Congress continue to encourage the rage against Donald Trump that is boiling over into violent protests, boycotts and death threats.

Recently, anti-Trump mobs blocked airports over the president's travel ban. Protesters destroyed property and attacked Trump supporters at U.C. Berkley. Disturbed rapper Eminem just released a rap about raping and killing my friend, Ann Coulter, for her conservative views. Madonna told people at the Women's March on Washington that she has "thought an awful lot about blowing up the White House." Deranged Democrat "activists" tried to assault new Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos. Left-wing groups also bullied retail giants Nordstrom, Neiman Marcus, Sears, Kmart and T.J. Maxx into pulling Ivanka Trump's brand from their stores.

What's happening now clearly shows just how far gone America actually was when President Trump took office. The left had a stranglehold over America, and we were on the verge of losing our country. Over the past eight years, they were aggressively implementing their socialist agenda and laying the groundwork to, as Obama promised, "Fundamentally transform America." Now that their hold on power is threatened and their destructive agendas are being rolled back, they're freaking out and being exposed for the nasty people they are!

According to a German study, 92 percent of left-wing protesters arrested on suspicion of politically fueled offences in Berlin are young men who live with their parents. I'm sure this is true with most of the left-wing anti-Trump "activists" in the U.S.

Leftists are heirs to the violent revolutionaries of history—the Russian and Chinese communists, the brown shirts in Nazi Germany and others come to mind. We know what happens when "idealistic" young agitators "resist" in the wrong way against the existing law and order, and tear it down with the false promise of building a utopia—millions die.

Yet, there are major organizations promoting this growing unrest and violence against a duly elected administration, and Barack Obama is at the center of it. Obama is setting up shop just a couple of miles from the White House to organize these left-wing malcontents in an attempt to salvage his own legacy (ego) and derail President Trump's agenda.

Obama has mobilized an army of 30,000 agitators who will fight every step of Trump's presidency through a network of leftist nonprofits led by Organizing for Action, the New York Post reported.

According to the Post, sources said Obama commanded the recent widespread anti-Trump riots across U.S. cities. These anarchists jammed airports to protest President Trump's travel ban. Obama even tweets from OFA's official account, insiders said.

If true, this is sedition, pure and simple, and Obama should be identified as an enemy of the American people.

The left is trying to copy the success of the tea-party movement by organizing at the grass roots. The "Indivisible Guide: A Practical Guide to Resisting A Trump Agenda" is a website with downloadable files containing action points that teach supporters how to effectively lobby and disrupt to get results. Their comrades are turning out by the thousands to shout down Republican members of Congress at town halls.

Left-wing activists recently showed up at Rep. Jason Chaffetz's town hall in Utah and demanded that that he investigate Donald Trump and save Obamacare. They repeatedly shouted down Chaffetz. Chaffetz was an anti-Trump voice throughout the presidential campaign, which likely explains the lack of Republican support at his event.

The evil on the left has been growing relatively quietly for years, and now that its power is being threatened, it's rearing its ugly head. Americans are fortunate to be able to see this evil and violent enemy—emboldened and encouraged by Obama and the Democratic Party—before it grows too powerful. Now that we plainly see the malevolence of the left, we need to rally around President Trump's America-first agenda, so we can finally cut the head off of this vicious monster before it destroys everything. *4

How Far Will You Let This Silliness Go?

... Now there are plenty of other problems our society must deal with. Illegal immigration is being turned upside down so that anyone who thinks security issues should be taken seriously are considered evil. Anyone who thinks government taking over ever increasing degrees of our daily lives is a problem are considered evil. The religion of peace is still killing people all over the world and if you mention what I just said you're considered evil. And the list goes on and on. A progressive agenda seems to be winning the culture war on many fronts. There's so much, and the war is so big, what can we do about it?

That's a good question, kind of. Those of us who work to pay for government benefits offered to the American people typically don't have a lot of time to organize—because we're working. In fact because of our current economic situation many of us have had to rely on those government benefits, and we may even wonder if the system was ever designed to help people get out of it. But we need to be careful how we live in every aspect of life. When trying to preserve liberty and fight the forces that erode it we need to guard against damaging our own side. Thinking has as much to do with the culture war as does policy; perhaps even more so. Did you notice part of a progressive attitude even in asking "what can we do about it"?

If we take a collective approach to dealing with society's problems we can easily get locked into a progressive trap: the problem is SO BIG. That mentality can lead us to feeling defeated, and we give up. Or it can lead us to thinking only the professionals and experts can fight this fight—which is eerily similar to the "government knows best" tenet of left wing ideology. When fighting against progressive policy we're fighting an uphill battle. There's so much going on that we need to fight those up hill battles, sure, but we don't have to limit the fight only to this hard way of doing things. We can also battle the supply lines, the beginnings of the culture war: people's hearts and minds.

We can challenge progressive ideas before they over take our laws. We can attack parts of the progressive agenda before they take root in our communities. It's much easier to win a battle that way, if we would just do it. But we're reluctant. There are some brave souls willing to devote their lives to this battle, and they should be commended. Much of what is now called the "new media" or "alternative media" is a great example of what can happen when freedom loving Americans work together to fight the culture war. Alternative media has grown by leaps and bounds in the last few decades. But that's only a good start, it's not the end.

Freedom lovers need to be active not only in living life but also in defending the very liberty we love. We all know the saying eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. But we don't act like we know it. We often live our lives as though merely exercising freedom is enough. It isn't. Our freedoms are eroding while jaws scrape the ground in astonishment. But there is something we can do.

Pick an issue. Build a community around defending freedom in that arena. You're right in thinking you, alone, can't do much. But you also won't accomplish much in just leaving it "to the experts". You can form a tribe with like minded people. And as a team you can accomplish something.

Make movies. Make music. Form a club, a think tank, a fund raiser, etc. Pick something you and a group of other freedom lovers can do together to join in the fight...

The progressive agenda has dominated public education for generations, and it's getting worse. The left is moving further left and training future citizens to perpetuate a Statist way of life. This agenda can be challenged on a grassroots level. If that movement grows, as it almost certainly would, you could push back... so freedom can ring. <sup>*6</sup>

Are We Serious About Education?

Two recent events—one on the east coast and one on the west coast—raise painful questions about whether we are really serious when we say that we want better education for minority children.

One of these events was an announcement by Dunbar High School in Washington, D.C., that it plans on August 19th to begin "an entire week of activities to celebrate the grand opening of our new $160 million state-of-the-art school building."

The painful irony in all this is that the original Dunbar High School building, which opened in 1916, housed a school with a record of high academic achievements for generations of black students, despite the inadequacies of the building and the inadequacies of the financial support that the school received.

By contrast, today's Dunbar High School is just another ghetto school with abysmal standards, despite Washington's record of having some of the country's highest levels of money spent per pupil—and some of the lowest test score results.

Housing an educational disaster in an expensive new building is all too typical of what political incentives produce.

We pay a lot of lip service to educational excellence. But too many institutions and individuals that have produced good educational results for minority students have not only failed to get support, but have even been undermined.

A recent example on the west coast is a charter school operation in Oakland called the American Indian Model Schools. The high school part of this operation has been ranked among the best high schools in the nation. Its students' test scores rank first in its district and fourth in the state of California.

But the California State Board of Education announced plans to shut down this charter school—immediately. Its students would have had to attend inferior public schools this September, except that a challenge in court stopped this sudden shutdown.

Why such a hurry to take drastic action? Because of a claim of financial improprieties against the charter schools' founder and former head, Ben Chavis.

Ben Chavis has not been found guilty of anything in a court of law. Nor has he even been brought to trial, though that would seem to be the normal thing to do if the charges were serious.

More important, the children have not been accused of anything. Nor is there any reason for urgency in immediately depriving them of an excellent education they are not likely to get in their local public schools.

What Ben Chavis and the American Indian Model Schools are really guilty of is creating academic excellence that shows up the public school system, both by this school's achievements and by the methods used to create those achievements, which go against the educational dogmas prevailing in the failing public schools.

If it seems strange that there would be a vendetta against an educator who has defied the education establishment and thereby improved the education of minority students, the fact is that Ben Chavis is only the latest in a long line of educators who have done just that—and aroused animosity, and even vindictiveness, as a result.

Washington's former public school head, Michelle Rhee, raised test scores in that city's school system and was demonized by the education establishment and politicians. She has left.

Years ago, high school math teacher Jaime Escalante, whose success in teaching Mexican American students was celebrated in the movie "Stand and Deliver," was eventually hounded out of Garfield High School in Los Angeles. Yet, while he was there, about one-fourth of all Mexican American students—in the entire country—who passed Advanced Placement Calculus came from that one school.

Marva Collins, who established a very successful private school for black children in Chicago, doing so on a shoestring, was likewise the target of hostility when she was a dedicated teacher in the public schools.

Other examples could be cited of educators who produced outstanding results for minority students—in New York, Houston and other places—and faced the wrath of the education establishment, which sees schools as places to provide jobs for teachers, rather than education for students, and which will not tolerate challenges to its politically correct dogmas. <sup>*7</sup>

Many People Do Not Remember This American War

The French Revolution had left that country in chaos. 26-year-old Napoleon fired cannons down the streets of Paris, mowing down French citizens in the 13 Vendémiaire revolt, 1795. The French Directory then made the young Napoleon general of the Army of Italy.

Napoleon won decisive victories against the Italians and Austrians in 1796. He conquered Ottoman Egypt in 1798. In 1799, when the French Directory collapsed, Napoleon staged a coup d'état, and seized power, being installed as first consul.

Needing funds, Napoleon sold the Louisiana Territory to the United States in 1803. After winning the Battle of Marengo, Napoleon had himself made emperor in 1804. After the Battle of Austerlitz, Napoleon dissolved the thousand-year-old Holy Roman Empire. In 1805, Napoleon suffered a set-back when his combined Franco-Spanish fleet was defeated at the Battle of Trafalgar.

Conquering across Europe, Napoleon invaded Russia in June of 1812 with 500,000 men. Six months later he retreated with only 50,000.

The Napoleonic Wars resulted in an estimated 6 million military and civilians deaths across Europe. Napoleon's power waned till he was exiled to the island of Elba. Britain, the most powerful nation in the world, then turned its attention back toward America.

The War of 1812 began on June 18, 1812.

James Madison wrote, Sept. 20, 1814: "The capture of nearly a thousand American vessels and the impressment of thousands of American seafaring citizens ... by the Government of Great Britain. ... Our beloved country ... persevering hostility ... must carry with it the good wishes of the impartial world and the best hopes of support from an Omnipotent and Kind Providence."

The British-backed Indian terrorists attacks on American settlements by supporting Shawnee leader Tecumseh. President James Madison told Congress, March 9, 1812: "The British Government, through ... a secret agent ... was employed ... fomenting disaffection ... and in intrigues with the disaffected, for the purpose of ... destroying the Union. ... The discovery of such a procedure ... will not fail to render more dear to the hearts of all good citizens that happy union of these States which, under Divine Providence, is the guaranty of their liberties."

Shawnee Chief Tecumseh, being armed by the British, formed a confederation of Indian tribes across a thousand mile frontier.

Incited by Tecumseh, the Red Stick Creek Indians attacked Fort Mims, Alabama, on Aug. 30, 1813. Driven by rumors the British were paying cash for scalps, the Red Sticks killed over 500 men, women and children in the largest Indian massacre in American history. Outraged Americans volunteered, including Davy Crockett, Sam Houston, and Daniel Boone, though Boone was turned down, being age 78.

In a proclamation of war, June 19, 1812, President James Madison stated: "I do moreover exhort all the good people of the United States ... as they feel the wrongs which have forced on them the last resort of injured nations ... to consult the best means under the blessing of Divine Providence of abridging its calamities."

On June 1, 1812, President James Madison told Congress: "We behold ... on the side of Great Britain a state of war. ... Whether the United States shall continue passive under these progressive usurpations and these accumulating wrongs...shall commit a just cause into the hands of the Almighty Disposer of Events."

The British had captured Maine's cities of Eastport, Castine, Hampden, Bangor and Machias.

A second Great Awakening Revival swept America. President Madison, who had introduced the First Amendment in the first session of Congress, proclaimed a day of public humiliation and prayer, July 9, 1812: "A day, to be set apart for the devout purpose of rendering the Sovereign of the Universe and the Benefactor of mankind the public homage due to His holy attributes; of acknowledging the transgressions which might justly provoke the manifestations of His divine displeasure; of seeking His merciful forgiveness, and His assistance in the great duties of repentance. ... and especially of offering fervent supplications that in the present season of calamity and war He would take the American people under His peculiar care and protection."

Madison stated, Nov. 4, 1812: "The war in which we are actually engaged in ... was preceded by a patience without example under wrongs accumulating without end. ... Appeal was accordingly made ... to the Just and All-powerful Being who holds in His hand the chain of events and the destiny of nations. ... We prosecute the war with united counsels ... until peace be so obtained ... under the Divine blessing."

On Feb. 24, 1813, Madison told Congress: "Great Britain had already introduced into her commerce during the war ... a mass of forgery and perjury ... making an unfortunate progress in undermining those principles of morality and religion which are the best foundation of national happiness. ... The general tendency of these demoralizing and disorganizing contrivances will be reprobated by the civilized and Christian world."

On March 4, 1813, President Madison stated: "I should be compelled to shrink if I ... felt less deeply a conviction that the war with a powerful nation ... is stamped with that justice which invites the smiles of Heaven on the means of conducting it to a successful termination."

On May 25, 1813, in a special session message to Congress, Madison stated: "The contest in which the United States are engaged appeals ... to the sacred obligation of transmitting entire to future generations that precious ... independence which is held in trust by the present from the goodness of Divine Providence."

On July 23, 1813, Madison proclaimed a national day of public humiliation and prayer: "In times of public calamity such as that of the war...it is especially becoming that the hearts of all should be ... turned to that Almighty Power in whose hands are the welfare and the destiny of nations. ... for ... He has blessed the United States with a political Constitution founded on the will and authority of the whole people and guaranteeing to each individual security, not only of his person and his property, but of those sacred rights of conscience so essential to his present happiness and so dear to his future hopes. ... that He would pardon our manifold transgressions and awaken and strengthen in all the wholesome purposes of repentance ... so He would ... bestow His blessings on our arms in resisting the hostile. ... If the public homage of a people can ever be worthy of the favorable regard of the Holy and Omniscient Being to whom it is addressed, it must be that in which those who join in it are guided only by their free choice, by the impulse of their hearts and the dictates of their consciences ... that religion, that gift of Heaven for the good of man, freed from all coercive edicts. ... and making no appeal but to reason, to the heart, and to the conscience, can spread its benign influence everywhere and can attract to the divine altar those freewill offerings of humble supplication."

The British attacked on Lake Erie. On Dec. 7, 1813, Madison stated: "It has pleased the Almighty to bless our arms both on the land and on the water. ... On Lake Erie, the squadron under the command of Captain Perry having met the British squadron of superior force, a sanguinary conflict ended in the capture of the whole. ... We may humbly repose our trust in the smiles of Heaven on so righteous a cause."

The British invaded the U.S. Capitol on Aug. 25, 1814, and burned the White House, the Library of Congress, the Treasury, the Patent Office and the Navy Yard. President James Madison was directing troops and Dolly Madison had to flee the White House.

On Sept. 1, 1814, in a proclamation after the British invaded the Capitol, Madison stated: "The enemy by a sudden incursion has succeeded in invading the capitol of the nation. ... During their possession ... though for a single day only, they wantonly destroyed the public edifices. ... An occasion which appeals so forcibly to the ... patriotic devotion of the American people, none will forget. The glory acquired by ... fathers in establishing the independence ... is now to be maintained by their sons with the ... strength and resources ... Heaven had blessed them."

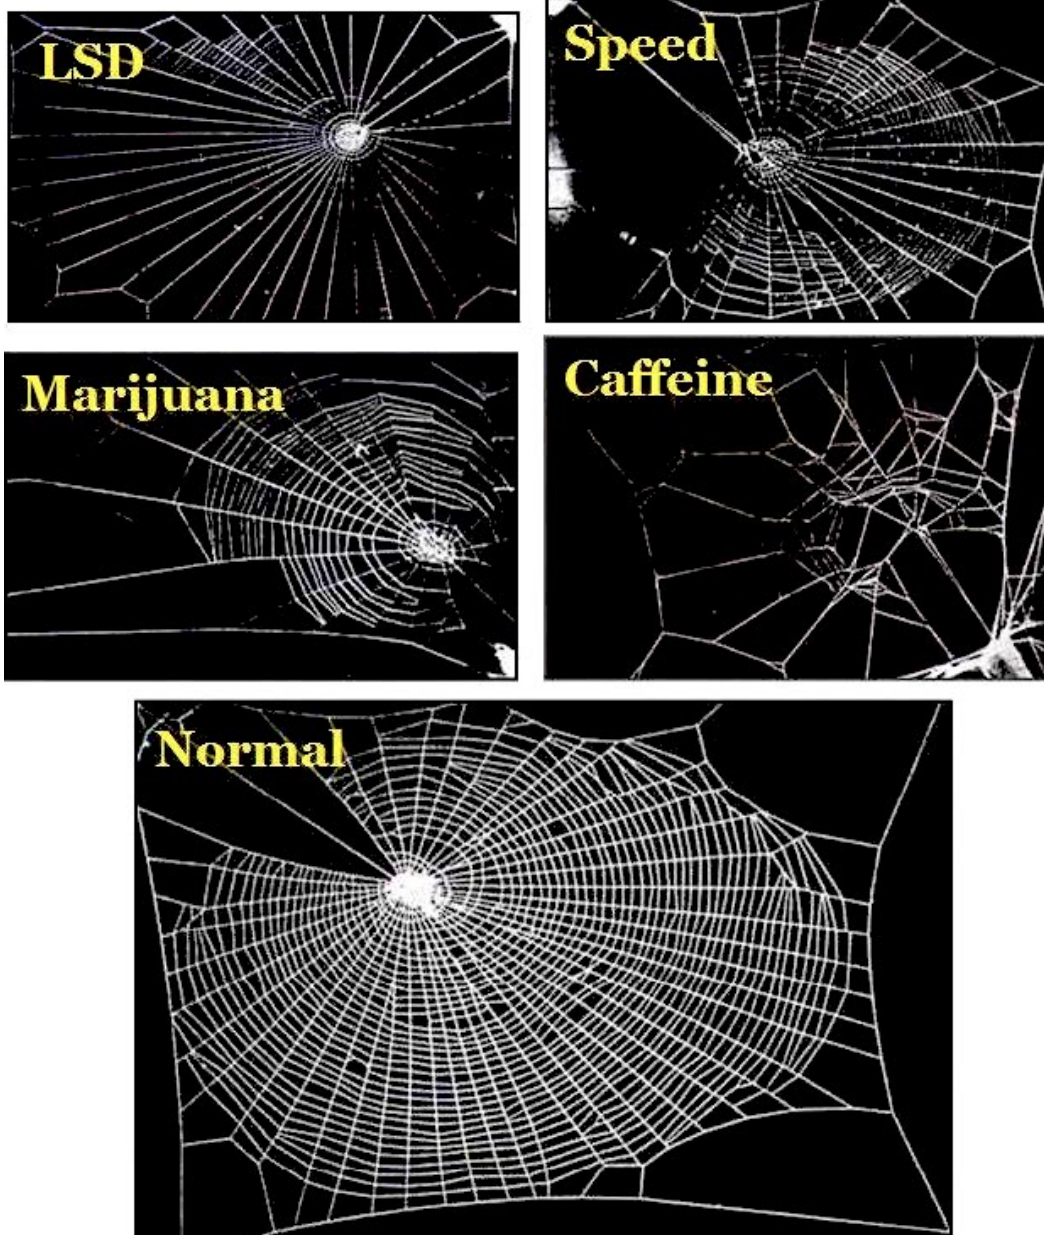

A few weeks later, on Sept. 13, 1814, the British bombarded Fort McHenry, as Francis Scott Key wrote of "bombs bursting in air."

On Nov. 16, 1814, Madison proclaimed a national day of public humiliation, fasting and prayer: "The two Houses of the National Legislature having by a joint resolution expressed their desire that in the present time of public calamity and war a day may be recommended to be observed by the people of the United States as a Day of Public Humiliation and Fasting and of Prayer to Almighty God for the safety and welfare of these States, His blessing on their arms, and a speedy restoration of peace. ... I have deemed it proper ... to recommend ... a day of ... voluntarily offering ... humble adoration to the Great Sovereign of the Universe, of confessing their sins and transgressions, and of strengthening their vows of repentance."

The British attacked New Orleans.

When the war ended, President James Madison addressed Congress, Feb. 18, 1815: "I lay before Congress copies of the treaty of peace ... between the United States and His Britannic Majesty. ... We accord in grateful acknowledgments for the protection which Providence has bestowed upon us."

On March 4, 1815, President Madison proclaimed a national day of thanksgiving: "To be observed by the people of the United States with religious solemnity as a day of thanksgiving and of devout acknowledgments to Almighty God for His great goodness manifested in restoring to them the blessing of peace. No people ought to feel greater obligations to celebrate the goodness of the Great Disposer of Events and of the Destiny of Nations than the people of the United States. ... To the same Divine Author of Every Good and Perfect Gift we are indebted for all those privileges and advantages, religious as well as civil, which are so richly enjoyed in this favored land ... especially for the restoration of the blessing of peace." *8
