

Alive [Rev. 20180629]

By J — Latest revision: <http://allis.foundation/Alive.pdf>

Uncertainty,
Why am I so worried?
I'm not, can't be.

Journey,
To save myself?
Indeed.

Patience,
I'm worried, skeptical;
Prepare.

Believe in yourself,
Things will work out.

For consider,
Enrichment comes from experience;

But to feel alive,
requires faith in myself.

To Wash Away The Pain

The storm I craved has caught me in it.

The terrace is flooding, water's overflowing the gutter and drains, pouring across the concrete slabbed floor.

It's gushing in rivers, making it's way away, washing, cleansing, purifying, I can smell it's odor a reminder to wake up and live more.

Why get absorbed by the sorrow of pain, for which dams are built to hinder it's freedom to flow?

Nothing prevents nature from taking it's toll, as sweating of nervous perceptions, gets cleansed in a moment of knowing something more.

Wash away the dirt, the grime, the crime, the thoughts, the intention, the revenge.

The pain always gets cleansed, in the waters of pure, enduring, undying love.

Everything's soaking, pouring out the sulking, drip drop drip into the gushers of the unknown.

Hurray we should say, it's for the flowers, the trees, the drought, the nature around us...

But really if we ask ourselves, what is the nature of water in a storm? But the result of restraint, pent up and built up, holding back the pain of seeing things for real.

That pain is meant for all of God's creations, including ourselves.

Let it nourish, polish, soak, wash, and flow.

If you go with it, it will do what's important, to cleanse thy soul, thy pain, thy whole.

Wash me inside and out, cleanse me from known walls built up.

It's here for me I say, for us, as a whole, an all encompassing unity, to see each and every one of us, including those hiding inside a hole.

Swim with it, let go, and you'll float where you're supposed to go.

Water, after all, will fill a hole, and lift out anything not belonging to it, raising it out and away...

Unless, one struggles and holds on against the currents, which may take all one's effort, when preferring to hide from thy self, and remain undiscovered, cowering and hiding.

It takes effort to maintain such a grip against mother nature, only the strongest can; eventually though, even they can no longer hold on...

Then let go, and hope it's not too late for love.

Start Over

You may already know what I'm about to tell you... But I want to focus your attention on it... you'll be wise to keep it at the forefront of your conscious awareness. Here it is, courtesy of philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche: "You have it in your power to invest everything you have lived through—your experiments, false starts, errors, delusions, passions, your love and your hope—into your goal, with nothing left over." ¹

1. Life isn't fair, but it's still good.
2. When in doubt, just take the next small step.
3. Life is too short to waste time hating anyone.
4. Don't take yourself so seriously. No one else does.
5. Pay off your credit cards every month.
6. You don't have to win every argument. Agree to disagree.
7. Cry with someone. It's more healing than crying alone.
8. It's OK to get angry with God. He can take it.
9. Save for retirement starting with your first paycheck.
10. When it comes to chocolate, resistance is futile.
11. Make peace with your past so it won't screw up the present.
12. It's OK to let your children see you cry.

13. Don't compare your life to others'. You have no idea what their journey is all about.
14. If a relationship has to be a secret, you shouldn't be in it.
15. Everything can change in the blink of an eye. But don't worry; God never blinks.
16. Life is too short for long pity parties. Get busy living, or get busy dying.
17. You can get through anything if you stay put in today.
18. A writer writes. If you want to be a writer, write.
19. It's never too late to have a happy childhood. But the second one is up to you and no one else.
20. When it comes to going after what you love in life, don't take no for an answer.
21. Burn... candles, use the nice sheets, wear the fancy lingerie. Don't save it for a special occasion. Today is special.
22. Overprepare, then go with the flow.
23. Be eccentric now. Don't wait for old age to wear purple.
24. The most important sex organ is the brain.
25. No one is in charge of your happiness except you.
26. Frame every so-called disaster with these words: "In five years, will this matter?"
27. Always choose life.
28. Forgive everyone everything.
29. What other people think of you is none of your business.
30. Time heals almost everything. Give time time.
31. However good or bad a situation is, it will change.
32. Your job won't take care of you when you are sick. Your friends will. Stay in touch.
33. Believe in miracles.
34. God loves you because of who God is, not because of anything you did or didn't do.
35. Whatever doesn't kill you really does make you stronger.
36. Growing old beats the alternative—dying young.
37. Your children get only one childhood. Make it memorable.
38. Read the Psalms. They cover every human emotion.
39. Get outside every day. Miracles are waiting everywhere.
40. If we all threw our problems in a pile and saw everyone else's, we'd grab ours back.
41. Don't audit life. Show up and make the most of it now.
42. Get rid of anything that isn't useful, beautiful or joyful.
43. All that truly matters in the end is that you loved.
44. Envy is a waste of time. You already have all you need.
45. The best is yet to come.
46. No matter how you feel, get up, dress up and show up.
47. Take a deep breath. It calms the mind.
48. If you don't ask, you don't get.
49. Yield.
50. Life isn't tied with a bow, but it's still a gift... ^{*2}

Maturity

Maturity is the ability to control anger and settle differences without violence and destruction.

Maturity is perseverance, the ability to sweat out a project or a situation in spite of heavy opposition and discouraging setbacks.

Maturity is the capacity to face unpleasantness and frustration, discomfort and defeat, without complaint or collapse.

Maturity is humility. It is being big enough to say, "I was wrong." And, when you're right, you need not say, "I told you so."

Maturity is the ability to make a decision and follow through. The immature spend their lives exploring endless possibilities and then do nothing.

Maturity means dependability, keeping one's word and coming through in a crisis. The immature are master of the alibi. They are conflicted and disorganized. Their lives are a maze of broken promises, former friends, unfinished business and good intentions that never materialize.

And—based on the Serenity Prayer—Maturity is the art of living in peace with what we cannot change, the courage to change what we know should be changed, and the wisdom to know the difference. *3

Parenting

Ladies and gentlemen, the lower economic and lower middle economic people are [not*] holding their end in this deal. In the neighborhood that most of us grew up in, parenting is not going on. (clapping) In the old days, you couldn't hook school because every drawn shade was an eye (laughing). And before your mother got off the bus and to the house, she knew exactly where you had gone, who had gone into the house, and where you got on whatever you had one and where you got it from. Parents don't know that today.

I'm talking about these people who cry when their son is standing there in an orange suit. Where were you when he was two? (clapping) Where were you when he was twelve? (clapping) Where were you when he was eighteen, and how come you don't know he had a pistol? (clapping) And where is his father, and why don't you know where he is? And why doesn't the father show up to talk to this boy?

The church is only open on Sunday. And you can't keep asking Jesus to ask doing things for you (clapping). You can't keep asking that God will find a way. God is tired of you (clapping and laughing). God was there when they won all those cases. 50 in a row. That's where God was because these people were doing something. And God said, "I'm going to find a way." I wasn't there when God said it... I'm making this up (laughter). But it sounds like what God would do (laughter).

We cannot blame white people. White people (clapping)... white people don't live over there. They close up the shop early. The Korean ones still don't know us as well... they stay open 24 hours (laughter).

I'm looking and I see a man named Kenneth Clark. He and his wife Mamie... Kenneth's still alive. I have to apologize to him for these people because Kenneth said it straight. He said you have to strengthen yourselves... and we've got to have that black doll. And everybody said it. Julian Bond said it. Dick Gregory said it. All these lawyers said it. And you wouldn't know that anybody had done a damned thing.

50 percent drop out rate, I'm telling you, and people in jail, and women having children by five, six different men. Under what excuse, I want somebody to love me, and as soon as you have it, you forget to parent. Grandmother, mother, and great grandmother in the same room, raising children, and the child knows nothing about love or respect of any one of the three of them (clapping). All this child knows is "gimme, gimme, gimme." These people want to buy the friendship of a child... and the child couldn't care less. Those of us sitting out here who have gone on to some college or whatever we've done, we still fear our parents (clapping and laughter). And these people are not parenting. They're buying things for the kid. $500 sneakers, for what? They won't buy or spend $250 on Hooked on Phonics. (clapping)

Kenneth Clark, somewhere in his home in upstate New York... just looking ahead. Thank God, he doesn't know what's going on, thank God. But these people, the ones up here in the balcony fought so hard. Looking at the incarcerated, these are not political criminals. These are people going around stealing Coca Cola. People getting shot in the back of the head over a piece of pound cake! Then we all run out and are outraged, "The cops shouldn't have shot him" What the hell was he doing with the pound cake in his hand? (laughter and clapping). I wanted a piece of pound cake just as bad as anybody else (laughter) And I looked at it and I had no money. And something called parenting said if get caught with it you're going to embarrass your mother. Not you're going to get your butt kicked. No. You're going to embarrass your mother. You're going to embarrass your family.

If knock that girl up, you're going to have to run away because it's going to be too embarrassing for your family. In the old days, a girl getting pregnant had to go down South, and then her mother would go down to get her. But the mother had the baby. I said the mother had the baby. The girl didn't have a baby. The mother had the baby in two weeks. (laughter) We are not parenting. Ladies and gentlemen, listen to these people, they are showing you what's wrong. People putting their clothes on backwards. Isn't that a sign of something going on wrong? (laughter)

Are you not paying attention, people with their hat on backwards, pants down around the crack. Isn't that a sign of something, or are you waiting for Jesus to pull his pants up (laughter and clapping). Isn't it a sign of something when she's got her dress all the way up to the crack... and got all kinds of needles and things going through her body. What part of Africa did this come from? (laughter). We are not Africans. Those people are not Africans, they don't know a damned thing about Africa. With names like Shaniqua, Shaligua, Mohammed and all that crap and all of them are in jail. (When we give these kinds names to our children, we give them the strength and inspiration in the meaning of those names. What's the point of giving them strong names if there is not parenting and values backing it up).

Brown Versus the Board of Education is no longer the white person's problem. We've got to take the neighborhood back (clapping). We've got to go in there. Just forget telling your child to go to the Peace Corps. It's right around the corner. (laughter) It's standing on the corner. It can't speak English. It doesn't want to speak English. I can't even talk the way these people talk. "Why you ain't where you is go, ra," I don't know who these people are. And I blamed the kid until I heard the mother talk (laughter). Then I heard the father talk. This is all in the house. You used to talk a certain way on the corner and you got into the house and switched to English. Everybody knows it's important to speak English except these knuckleheads. You can't land a plane with "why you ain't..." You can't be a doctor with that kind of crap coming out of your mouth. There is no Bible that has that kind of language. Where did these people get the idea that they're moving ahead on this. Well, they know they're not, they're just hanging out in the same place, five or six generations sitting in the projects when you're just supposed to stay there long enough to get a job and move out.

Now look, I'm telling you. It's not what they're doing to us. It's what we're not doing. 50 percent drop out. Look, we're raising our own ingrown immigrants. These people are fighting hard to be ignorant. There's no English being spoken, and they're walking and they're angry. Oh God, they're angry and they have pistols and they shoot and they do stupid things. And after they kill somebody, they don't have a plan. Just murder somebody. Boom. Over what? A pizza? And then run to the poor cousin's house. They sit there and the cousin says "what are you doing here?" "I just killed somebody, man." "What?" "I just killed somebody, I've got to stay here." "No, you don't." "Well, give me some money, I'll go..." "Where are you going?" "North Carolina." Everybody wanted to go to North Carolina. But the police know where you're going because your cousin has a record.

Five or six different children, same woman, eight, ten different husbands or whatever, pretty soon you're going to have to have DNA cards so you can tell who you're making love to. You don't who this is. It might be your grandmother. (laughter) I'm telling you, they're young enough. Hey, you have a baby when you're twelve. Your baby turns thirteen and has a baby, how old are you? Huh? Grandmother. By the time you're twelve, you could have sex with your grandmother, you keep those numbers coming. I'm just predicting.

I'm saying Brown Vs. Board of Education. We've got to hit the streets, ladies and gentlemen. I'm winding up, now , no more applause. I'm saying, look at the Black Muslims. There are Black Muslims standing on the street corners and they say so forth and so on, and we're laughing at them because they have bean pies and all that, but you don't read "Black Muslim gunned down while chastising drug dealer." You don't read that. They don't shoot down Black Muslims. You understand me. Muslims tell you to get out of the neighborhood. When you want to clear your neighborhood out, first thing you do is go get the Black Muslims, bean pies and all (laughter). And your neighborhood is then clear. The police can't do it.

I'm telling you Christians, what's wrong with you? Why can't you hit the streets? Why can't you clean it out yourselves? It's our time now, ladies and gentlemen. It is our time (clapping). And I've got good news for you. It's not about money. It's about you doing something ordinarily that we don't get in somebody else's business. It's time for you to not accept the language that these people are speaking, which will take them nowhere. What the hell good is Brown V. Board of Education if nobody wants it?

What is it with young girls getting after some girl who wants to still remain a virgin. Who are these sick black people and where did they come from and why haven't they been parented to shut up? To go up to girls and try to get a club where "you are nobody..." this is a sickness ladies and gentlemen and we are not paying attention to these children. These are children. They don't know anything. They don't have anything. They're homeless people. All they know how to do is beg. And you give it to them, trying to win their friendship. And what are they good for? And then they stand there in an orange suit and you drop to your knees,(crying sound) He didn't do anything, he didn't do anything." Yes, he did do it. And you need to have an orange suit on too (laughter, clapping).

So, ladies and gentlemen, I want to thank you for the award (big laughter) and giving me an opportunity to speak because, I mean, this is the future, and all of these people who lined up and done... they've got to be wondering what the hell happened. Brown V. Board of Education, these people who marched and were hit in the face with rocks and punched in the face to get an education and we got these knuckleheads walking around who don't want to learn English (clapping) I know that you all know it. I just want to get you as angry that you ought to be. When you walk around the neighborhood and you see this stuff, that stuff's not funny. These people are not funny anymore. And that's not brother. And that's not my sister. They're faking and they're dragging me way down because the state, the city and all these people have to pick up the tab on them because they don't want to accept that they have to study to get an education.

We have to begin to build in the neighborhood, have restaurants, have cleaners, have pharmacies, have real estate, have medical buildings instead of trying to rob them all. And so, ladies and gentlemen, please, Dorothy Height, where ever she's sitting, she didn't do all that stuff so that she could hear somebody say "I can't stand algebra, I can't stand... and "what you is." It's horrible.

Basketball players, multimillionaires can't write a paragraph. Football players, multimillionaires, can't read. Yes. Multimillionaires. Well, Brown V Board of Education, where are we today? It's there. They paved the way. What did we do with it. The white man, he's laughing, got to be laughing. 50 percent drop out, rest of them in prison.

You got to tell me that if there was parenting, help me, if there was parenting, he wouldn't have picked up the Coca Cola bottle and walked out with it to get shot in the back of the head. He wouldn't have. Not if he loved his parents. And not if they were parenting! Not if the father would come home. Not if the boy hadn't dropped the sperm cell inside of the girl and the girl had said, "No, you have to come back here and be the father of this child." Not... "I don't have to."

Therefore, you have the pile up of these sweet beautiful things born by nature raised by no one. Give them presents. You're raising pimps. That's what a pimp is. A pimp will act nasty to you so you have to go out and get them something. And then you bring it back and maybe he or she hugs you. And that's why pimp is so famous. They've got a drink called the "Pimp-something." You all wonder what that's about, don't you? Well, you're probably going to let Jesus figure it out for you (laughter). Well, I've got something to tell you about Jesus. When you go to the church, look at the stained glass things of Jesus. Look at them. Is Jesus smiling? Not in one picture. So, tell your friends. Let's try to do something. Let's try to make Jesus smile. Let's start parenting. Thank you, thank you (clapping, cheers) *4

One day an old man was walking along the beach. It was low tide, and the sand was littered with thousands of stranded starfish that the water had carried in and then left behind.

The man began walking very carefully so as not to step on any of the beautiful creatures. Since the animals still seemed to be alive, he considered picking some of them up and putting them back in the water, where they could resume their lives.

The man knew the starfish would die if left on the beach's dry sand but he reasoned that he could not possibly help them all, so he chose to do nothing and continued walking.

Soon afterward, the man came upon a small child on the beach who was frantically throwing one starfish after another back into the sea. The old man stopped and asked the child, "What are you doing?"

"I'm saving the starfish," the child replied.

"Why waste your time? There are so many you can't save them all, so why does it matter?" asked the man.

*Without hesitation, the child picked up another starfish and tossed the starfish back into the water... "It mattered to that one," the child said. 5

Existence

Earth isn't the center of our galaxy. It's the center of the universe. We are very unique and in a very unique place.... And God has a very unique plan for us. Science and religion have long been at war because both sides feel threatened by the other. I say, enough. God is the MASTER scientist. The order of all things that make life possible is from the intentional, intelligent design of our CREATOR. And despite all of man's arrogance, we cannot create a single living cell. We cannot make something from nothing. But God did. And science has been pointing us to that conclusion over and over and over again. No matter how much academia tries to hide and suppress the truth, it is there, staring them in the face, and all the lies and denials can't and won't change it. But here's the good news: Our Creator is not some cold, disengaged and distant deity with a lab set. He knows everything about everyone, and in spite of this... He still loves us. He wants so much for everyone to know Him. If you want to know God, all you have to do is ask. He stands at the door waiting. Knock and the door will be opened to you. Let Him into your heart and you will know a purer love than you have ever known before. Then read His word through new eyes and with a new heart and see that we were created ...not to serve a selfish, mean task master, but a loving, caring, giving Father whose will for us is to have peace and prosperity, wholeness and goodness, love and happiness. However, He gives us all the choice to accept or reject Him..... But...just look around you. The evidence of His existence is everywhere. The natural world is abundant with proof that only an intelligent, omnipotent Creator could have made it all possible. If you reject Him, at least accept His existence..... But if you reject His existence, you accept the notion that all life on earth and the earth itself, and the entire universe and everything in it just happened by chance along with the endless number of exquisitely precise conditions that had to be present and constantly maintained from then to now for US to exist!!.....to exist AT ALL!!.... Much less to e-v-o-l-v-e from a single celled organism.....to apes.....to us. God is real, folks. It takes more FAITH to believe otherwise than to believe in Him. *6

Jesus' Birth Day

This is the day we choose to celebrate the birthday of Jesus... Even if you ignore the religious elements of it.. When you think about it, it's a pretty awesome story about one man that completely changed the world just by walking around and teaching others how to love and to take care of each other and to love their God... That scared the leaders, who would be out of a job if they were no longer needed, so they nailed him to a tree and killed him... And over 2,000 years later, people still are learning from him.

I've said this before... But it's always interested me what "Star" the the Group of Astrologers (wise men) would follow... History shows these astrologers/wise men (they were called "those that pray in silence") were probably from the Orient... (from a land called Shir)... Descendants from Seth, the 3rd son of Adam & Eve... I wondered what alignment would be so powerful of a sign, that would cause a group of star-watchers who waited for generation after generation, to appear... An planetary alignment that would indicate that would indicate a new "King" would has been born... So I ran extensive searches that spanned over 26,000 years and found only one date in History that would be powerful enough for me, if I lived back then, to pack my bags and to go looking for the "Star-Child" (as they called him)... That day was September 26 or 27th in the year 0002 ad...

Check out the chart below... If you look at the gray area in the image below... All those planets/asteroids were all located at the same degree (00 Libra) of the chart... (the yellow spot in the image below)... 7 of them in order... Pluto, Chiron, Ceres, Pallas-Athena, Vesta, Juno & the Sun... Imagine that Huge Brightness shining on the Big Sky and sitting on the Cusp of the Cardinal Sign of Libra... A sign that signifies leadership and the "Balance of Relationships"...

Perhaps a bridge between the heavens & the earth... Yeah, that would have caused me to pack my bags & load up my camel to go take a ride... Gid-dee-up Camel Doggies...

Personally, I'm not one that is trying to change the world... But I do try to bring myself to higher levels of love & understanding... It would be rather dull if everybody thought & felt the same way... Like programmed robots... I like the differences in people & cultures... (especially the food)... One thing you do realize when you learn astrology is that we may look different and like different things, but deep inside we are all the same... We all have the same planets rolling around our charts messing with us... And occasionally creating chaos & excitement.

Christmas time is very special to me as it has some of the my greatest memories and also some of the hardest & most difficult times of my life... I guess I've seen both sides of it, and somehow I made it through... Even when I had my doubts... I won't bore you with my "tales of woe"... But I've learned to "Keep the Faith" and it sure isn't easy sometimes... But that's why we have each other.

If I could, I'd move heaven & earth for each of you guys... But I can't... So the best I can offer is another year of my horoscopes... The best & most accurate I can give you... Happy Christmas!!!⁷

Uncivilized

"There's a lot of this kind of uncivilized behavior out there," said Zhang. "Take for example the sign outside the Louvre Museum only in Chinese characters that forbids people from urinating or defecating wherever they want." *8

Good Intentions

I used to live in California—not far from Altamont Pass, where one of the first "wind farms" was built.

Due to the danger of fires, the grass below the windmills is kept trimmed (a once a year process in the dry hills of California after the rainy season ends). The short grass makes it easier for raptor birds to observe and catch prey ("field mice", voles, etc.) that are attracted to the grassy slopes. This turns the windmills into raptor killing machines, as the birds are unable to adapt to the moving blades (they don't see them and they don't understand them as they have never previously encountered anything like them in the environment).

The idea is that the Altamont pass wind farm would take load off the fossil fueled power sources... but when it is hot (in the valley) the on-shore winds are not blowing, and Altamont is idle. (This is when AC is at peak demand.) When the high temperatures in the valley create a "local low pressure", the onshore winds return, bringing cooler air into the valley. The windmills turn just as people reduce their AC use as the cool air brings down the outside temperature. This cycle repeats every 4 to 6 days throughout the dryer, hotter season. Essentially, this system calibrates the windmills to turn just as peak demand decreases. Since fossil fuel power stations are required to meet peak needs, the supply of windmill electricity does not reduce the capital needs for the fossil fuel plants. There is some reduction in fossil fuel use, but much of the base load is covered by hydro-power and nuclear power, neither of which contribute to "greenhouse gasses."

The reality is that the "greens" have NEVER been about the environment. Almost from the beginning of the "environmental movement" the left has seen it as an opportunity to impose central planning and restrictions on individual prerogatives through the "excuse" of environmental needs.

Yes... great progress has been made reducing pollution of the air, water, and environment generally. Progress that might have been made in any event, since a more prosperous economy can afford a cleaner environment. The regulations may have helped -- but other, free-market based approaches are and were also possible.

Terms like "environmental justice" are simply code words that mean central, bureaucratic control of everybody and everything. This is the opposite of what our country was created for—to have a government that protects our individual rights. *9

Unforeseen until this massive expansion of production capability we are now discovering that acres and acres of solar and/or wind power production fields are either incinerating or bludgeoning birds to death in mid-flight....

America's green-energy movement has a lot of crossover members with the "save the whales, birds and field mice" crowd. For the most part those who hate big oil, love solar and wind, and scream the need to protect all forms of wildlife tend to be under the same political tent. They now find themselves facing conflict over the effects of both wind and solar farms on America's birds.

ExtremeTech.com reported on California's new solar power plant claiming it is "actually a death ray that's incinerating birds mid-flight." So noteworthy is the death and destruction that NBC actually ran a report on its "Today Show" highlighting what ground engineers at one such plant call "streamers"—birds catching fire and leaving a stream of smoke behind as they plummet to the ground dead. Websites and news sources reporting similar phenomena of birds being microwaved in midair pepper the internet. Wind farms are no better.

Last week the bird advocacy group American Bird Conservancy released an analysis claiming that guidelines published by the Department of Fish and Wildlife are not sufficient for protecting birds, that too many birds are being killed, and it's time to roll out some new, tougher regulations. Many of the affected birds are some of America's most majestic, including eagles, hawks, falcons, and other birds of prey. The report claims that more than 30,000 turbines have been installed nationwide and 50,000 others are planned in areas where birds are particularly vulnerable to fatal collisions.

(One might wonder how a bird can be stuck by a turbine blade while flying. Birds of prey are much like texting drivers, looking one way, moving another. Hawks and eagles are not looking where they're going while flying—there's [typically] nothing in the sky for them to collide with—they're looking down for movement or anything else that could possibly classify as "lunch.")

In 2013 the federal government for the first time enforced environmental laws protecting birds against wind energy facilities, winning a $1 million settlement from Duke Energy when the company pleaded guilty to killing 14 eagles and 149 other birds at its wind farms.

Knowing full well how vicious the green left can be, the wind power industry would just as soon keep quiet about the issue of birds being killed by windmills. In 2014, PacificCorp, which operates 13 wind farms, actually sued the federal government to stop the release of bird death data. PacificCorp of Portland, Oregon sought an injunction in U.S. District Court to prevent the Interior Department from releasing information sought under the U.S. Freedom of Information Act claiming the information was confidential. In December of the same year PacificCorp entered a guilty plea and agreed to pay a $2.5 million fine to settle charges directly connected to the deaths of birds at its wind farms.

That birds are dying at the hands of these 'new energy' sources is documented and undeniable. That raises the new set of questions concerning what, if anything, to do about it that in turn leads back to the principle of unintended consequences.

The feds are eyeing several measures which may help decrease the number of accidental bird deaths such as "screamers", including noisemakers on the tips of the rotary blades which whistle as air passes through them, L.E.D. lights which make the structures and blades more visible at night, and also erecting audible barriers not unlike the invisible fences used to keep dogs in a confined area to help prevent birds from flying into solar farms.

No matter what solutions are ultimately settled on this much is certain: liberals 'solving' the problems liberals have created will result in more laws, more rules, more regulations, and more restrictions on businesses which in turn results in federal agencies having more power, more duties of enforcement and therefore ever-swelling budgets. Costs to operate will go up for the energy producers. Costs to regulate the producers will go up for the government. And the tab for all of these increased costs will ultimately come to rest on the shoulders of the consumer and taxpayer. ^{*10}

Administratium

The problem is an unwritten rule that no one seems able to correct. It requires everything the gubmint does must contain at least 17% administratium. What is that substance? The heaviest element known to science was recently discovered by investigators at a major U.S. research university.

The element, tentatively named administratium, has no protons or electrons and thus has an atomic number of 0. However, it does have a single neutron, 75 vice neutrons, and 111 assistant vice neutrons, thus giving it an atomic mass of 312. These 312 particles are held together by a force that involves the continuous exchange of meson-like particles called morons. It is also surrounded by vast quantities of lepton-like particles called peons.

Since it has no electrons, administratium is inert. However, it can be detected chemically as it impedes every reaction it comes in contact with. According to its discoverers, a minute amount of administratium has caused one reaction to take over four days to complete when it would have normally occurred in less than a second.

Administratium has a normal half-life of approximately three years, at which time it does not decay, but instead undergoes a reorganization in which assistant neutrons and assistant vice neutrons exchange places. Some studies have shown that the atomic mass actually increases after each such reorganization...

Scientists point out that administratium is known to be toxic at any level of concentration, and can easily destroy any otherwise productive reaction when it is allowed to accumulate. Attempts are being made to determine how administratium can be controlled to prevent irreversible damage, but results to date have not been promising. ^{*11}

Yoko Meshi

"As an untranslatable, this one ranks high on my list of favorites. I could not improve on the background given by commentator Boye Lafayette de Mente about this beautiful word, yoko meshi. Taken literally, meshi means 'boiled rice' and yoko means 'horizontal,' so combined you get 'a meal eaten sideways.' This is how the Japanese define the peculiar stress induced by speaking a foreign language: yoko is a humorous reference to the fact that Japanese is normally written vertically, whereas most foreign languages are written horizontally. How do English-speakers describe the headache of communicating in an alien tongue? I don't think we can, at least not with as much ease." *13

God Conscious

"We have divine aid ready and available to us..."

Close your eyes, breathe.

Bring whatever it is in our mind which we need and want help with.

Feel God's presence. Your engaged to connect with him.

Connect with (the spirit of) God (daily)

- Your heart if engaged, and your mind is focused (between the eyes).
- "God, I need this" (and imagine, think what that is) and surrender to him.
- Ask for help, we don't know what it looks like.
- Part of surrendering is releasing control.
- Feel yourself vibrating in a bubble of trust. He knows.
- Show gratitude, express appreciation and thanks in a prayer.
- "Show me the steps I need to take, so I can help you materially."
- And it is done. *14

Descent

Your sign has now emerged from what I would call it's "Descent into Hell"... For the past couple years, this energy had done it's best to rock you at your very foundation... It's a miracle that you can still get up & function fercrissakes... hehe... But at the same time, this energy has also created a foundation so strong that is nearly un-breakable at this point... it may take you a while to realize how strong & powerful you have become, but you will... It's the blending of the Body & Soul... To where nothing is impossible anymore! *15

The biggest mistake people make, is to assume what I want or like based on my past, as they usually don't realize "why" I did the things I did, or sought out the experiences I did. To believe so, is foolish beyond measure, for I was living in fear, and seeking self-destructive pursuits, rather than growth and prosperity. So everything in the past, I chose to do for all the wrong reasons...

Assume

Don't ASSUME anything. As we know, assuming any thing makes an ASS out of U and ME.

To Be Nothing

There's a sing along song, known to all, known to many.

That helps one overcome what we can't see,
but what we're feeling.

The days are getting longer, time is speeding.

Awareness growing,
our conscious awakening.

We find again meaning.

A simple, a simple value of being.

Tick, tock, tick, tock, the clock is freeing.

Yes, but... No, but...
What, but... But, what?

Yes, but... Nothing!

Rights

Few today understand the nature and history of rights. The word right in this context historically refers to "proper" or "straight" behavior. Proper behavior is that which harms no other. We differentiate proper behavior from good behavior in order to praise the latter. Good behavior such as helping those less fortunate, is good because it lessens harm to innocents and is not obligatory. This is in my mind the greatest failure of the collectivists. They confuse proper and good, with the natural but erroneous result of believing that what is good is also obligatory. Of course were it obligatory it would cease to be good. We do not congratulate and praise people for refraining from theft, murder, rape, or other harms to innocents. We expect this peaceful behavior because it is obligatory. We do praise those who help others precisely because it is not obligatory.

Then too there are many other problems with the claims of positive obligation that collectivists make. Morality never requires the impossible. True moral obligations are always in effect. There is no moral rule that says : Do not murder, except on odd Tuesdays. But the supposed positive obligations that the collectivists would impose on us, are impossible to abide. We cannot help the poor while sleeping. We cannot fulfill our "obligation" to others 100% of the time. In contrast we can refrain from theft 100% of the time, just as we can refrain from theft or other harms to others. Clearly these positive "obligations" cannot be obligations at all.

Finally rights can only exist with regard to the individual. Only the individual can take action and only the individual is responsible for her action. Rights exist because we are non-irrational (harm avoiding), vulnerable, generally aware, self-considering, decision making entities. Groups have none of these traits separate from distinct individuals. There cannot be any social right, or governmental right (those are privileges). There cannot be any collective right at all for the collective is not a vulnerable, decision making entity. ^{*16}

Progressivism

American criminal law today does not reflect what the USA inherited from common law England, complete with the "Rights of Englishmen" that Americans also assumed for themselves. From the founding of the republic until the Progressive Era of the early 1900s, criminal law in this country mostly reflected the principle of malum in se, a legal doctrine that holds that certain acts are bad in themselves.

For example, almost every society that has existed in history has had prohibitions against murder, theft, and robbery. From Hammurabi's Code to the Ten Commandments to modern law, certain actions have been criminalized because they involved things everyone recognized as being wrong. This does not mean that such laws cannot be abused, but they do tend to reflect universal principles.

Unfortunately, legal systems also have reflected the legal doctrine of malum prohibitum which says certain acts are bad and worthy of punishment because they violate certain rules that government agents have created. For example, at the turn of the 20th Century, it was legal for Americans to ingest drugs like marijuana and cocaine, and alcohol was readily available. In a couple of decades, however, the law prohibited consumption of drugs and possession of alcoholic beverages because the powers that be had decreed as such. Furthermore, violation of those laws could mean a spell in prison, something that previously had been reserved for those who ran afoul of malum in se laws.

American Progressives, who had Grand Visions for how to organize life for Americans—including those Americans who had no desire to take part in the Grand Visions, tended to favor a legal system based upon malum prohibitum because they believed that individuals in society needed to conform to a set of social and political ideals created by the Great Superior Minds of Progressives. The idea that governments should not interfere with the routines of daily life—and especially those routines that involved mutually-consensual acts and the actions of the marketplace—was scorned by Progressives, who believed that individuals should not be permitted to act outside of boundaries set by political authorities who supposedly knew what was best for everyone else.

Progressives relentlessly attacked social institutions that did not easily fit under the umbrella of state-based control, and over time those institutions—entities like religious groups, voluntary societies, and local education—succumbed to statist pressure. All of these actions took place under the guise of "reforms" in which society was to be centralized under federal power with Progressive intellectuals and "reformers" being the ones to determine the boundaries of conduct of individuals.

The so-called Progressive reforms transformed American law in two ways. First, its insistence upon the expansion of state power and state-enforced regulation over the lives of individuals meant the inevitable growth of criminal law under malum prohibitum. The "duty" of Americans was to "obey" state directives, and those who did not obey were to be punished via imprisonment. Thus, in 1919, it was legal to possess alcoholic beverages and it was legal for business firms to brew and distill them. A year later, such things were crimes, accomplished by the mere stroke of a pen.

Second, by demanding the centralization of political, legal, and economic power via Washington, Progressives helped to create a federal legal system which permits prosecutors to take almost any individual action and find ways to criminalize it. No longer was the legal emphasis upon the protection of life, liberty, and property, but rather it was on subjected people following sets of rules created by intellectuals and politicians.

The legal system that came from the Progressive Era and has metastasized unabated for more than a century is hostile to the venerable "Rights of Englishmen" that undergirded American criminal law for many years and nowhere is this better reflected than in the evisceration of the important but now little-known legal doctrine of mens rea. To understand the contempt that modern Progressives have for individuals and to understand the utter tyranny of modern American criminal law, one first must understand why mens rea is vital to protecting individual rights.

The term mens rea essentially means "a guilty mind." That is, in order for one's action to be determined as criminal or not, the mindset of the person engaging in a particular action was paramount. For example, say I am driving cautiously in a neighborhood when suddenly a child chasing a ball comes out of nowhere and appears in front of my car, and I hit him. I did not intend to hit the child, nor was I acting in a reckless manner; the result was an unavoidable accident, not a criminal act on my part.

However, say that I see a child in the street and speed up my car in order to hit him. The action was deliberate and, thus, criminal under a doctrine of mens rea. In other words, intent matters under criminal law, or at least it is supposed to matter.

The growth of the regulatory and bureaucratic state with its emphasis upon malum prohibitum, however, is incompatible with mens rea and over the years, American courts have slowly but surely eliminated it from this nation's de facto body of law. Every year, local, state, and federal agencies churn out thousands of new regulations, most of which have the power of law, with many carrying criminal penalties for people who violate them. Furthermore, the American courts have ruled time and again that "ignorance of the law is no excuse" for disobeying them.

In other words—and I am not exaggerating here—every American is responsible for knowing every regulation and every law that is passed and, more important, must obey each one or face a penalty and even prison for failure to do so. For ordinary people, there is no exception unless a judge or administrator decides not to punish someone for violating a rule of which the person had no knowledge.

There are classes of people that are exempt from having to know all of the laws and regulations, however: those charged with enforcing the laws, from administrators to police to prosecutors to judges. I am not kidding, nor do I exaggerate. The very people who are supposed to be the most intimate with laws and regulations because their very livelihoods rest upon their enforcement also are the very people who are legally permitted to be ignorant of such laws and regulations.

It gets worse. People in those enforcement lines of work who are caught violating the law or policies pertaining to enforcement are exempt from having people whom the law enforcers have victimized from seeking legal redress in the courts. Thus, when the three falsely-accused defendants in the Duke Lacrosse Case filed lawsuits against the City of Durham and prosecutor Michael Nifong, the federal courts dismissed most of the claims because of the legal doctrines of immunity that the courts and legislatures have imposed.

The effect is that wrongdoers, should they be employed by government, are pretty much exempted from having to face consequences of their wrongdoing. This is not an oversight; it is the result of the political goals that perpetrators of modern regimes have imposed. I call it a corollary of what economists call “Capture Theory.” The government employees in the law enforcement lines of work have “captured” the system and have rewritten the rules in order to protect themselves at the expense of the people these government agents victimize every day.

And even in the very rare events when perpetrators are charged with wrongdoing, they often are acquitted by the system. For example, the infamous “not guilty” verdict in a recent trial of two former police officers from Fullerton, California, for beating a homeless man to death despite the overwhelming evidence of their guilt (evidence caught on videotape) reflect the modern political reality that government agents truly are shielded from consequences of their own actions, even when they break the law. William Norman Grigg also has documented numerous times when U.S. police officers essentially engaged in summary executions of unarmed and unthreatening people, yet have faced no legal or even personal consequences for their actions.

Accusations and Political Goals

All of this brings us back not only to the Duke case but also to the thousands of cases in which people are charged with sexual assault and/or child molestation. At this point, I will make a very provocative statement: U.S. prisons are full of thousands of wrongfully-convicted people and thousands more outside of prison live under the weight of being convicted felons. American law has become so tyrannical that many wrongfully-charged people cannot defend themselves from false charges because the law is stacked against them.

In 1974, Congress passed the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act or CAPTA, better known as the Mondale Act for its vocal sponsor, Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota. The law had all of the hallmarks of the Progressive outlook for which Mondale was famous, including the offering of federal money to the states to encourage the prosecution of more people for child abuse and child molestation. (Congress passed new editions of CAPTA over the years and it remains on the books today.)

Congress later passed the Violence Against Women Act which encouraged states and localities to prosecute rape and sexual assault against women, promising federal money to those governmental entities for doing so. The laws also helped to create and fund governmental and government-connected agencies such as Child Protective Services to investigate claims of abuse and molestation and to aid law enforcement agencies in bringing charges against alleged perpetrators of abuse.

Understand that the offenses listed in these laws are not imaginary constructs. Children are abused and, yes, many are molested and the damage done to those children is incalculable. If the law had resulted in the actual prosecution and punishment of real perpetrators, that would have been one thing—and I would not have written this article. Rape and sexual assault are terrible things and no one denies that fact.

Instead, the laws led to what I believe are thousands of false charges and convictions because they changed the fundamental rules of evidence. Before CAPTA and the VAWA, most states required corroborating evidence besides the mere accusation of abuse and the like because authorities recognized that it is too easy for people to make false charges due to ulterior motives.

For example, it is not unusual for warring spouses in divorce litigation to make accusations of abuse or worse against one another to aid their own claim for child custody. Before CAPTA, such accusations would have required evidence other than the spouse's claim. After CAPTA and after VAWA, the accusation itself became absolute proof of criminal wrongdoing.

These new standards of evidence, while guaranteeing false accusations and wrongful convictions, were not written to satisfy justice but rather to satisfy pressure groups with political goals. The modern child protection industry, with parents having to worry about a government agency falsely accusing them of abuse or worse and having their children removed from their own care, could not exist without CAPTA. Likewise, it now is much too easy for someone to be accused falsely of rape, something that feminists and their political allies have demanded for years.

What makes things worse is that prosecutors, both state and federal, are permitted to pile up charges upon charges on people and then hold the very real prospect over their heads of draconian punishments should they be convicted on even one of those charges. The result is that 95 percent of all U.S. criminal cases result in guilty pleas, and lawyers of people who demonstrably are innocent often will encourage their clients to plead to "something" just to give prosecutors their little victories and to prevent even worse punishments.

Many other writers and I have written about how a false accusation industry sprang up, and how innocent people were railroaded into prison. Absurd prosecutions now have become the norm, as the lure of federal money and political benefits to crusading prosecutors have overcome any whit of interest in justice.

In the LRC piece, "Nifonged in Narragansett," I wrote nearly seven years ago, the attorney general of Rhode Island charged a man with rape for actions he allegedly committed 32 years before. The accuser had been undergoing the infamous (and discredited) "recovered memories" therapy and suddenly "remembered" this man having raped her. Now, she could not remember when or where it happened. Instead, she just "remembered" that it was some time in a six month span and somewhere in the neighborhood where she lived. In other words, the whole thing reeked of absurdity, but it was perfectly logical under the terms of the VAWA. (Shortly after the LRC piece was published, the AG dropped the charges. However, that did not change the fact that he still could have won a conviction with just the woman's claims, should the jurors have chosen to believe her.)

Likewise, we saw a spate of child molestation investigations that would have made the weirdest episodes of "The Twilight Zone" seem to be logical by comparison. I have written about many of them and have seen how some of the worst offenders—like Janet Reno—have been rewarded for gaining wrongful convictions. For that matter, Nifong himself was the darling of the U.S. mainstream media for many months (and especially the New York Times) until it became abundantly clear that he was lying. And even then, a number of media and legal writers, including Lester Munson of ESPN, still tried to cover for him.

Many of these wrongful convictions came right from the playbook pages of Progressivism. First, federal laws changed the legal incentives to financially and politically-reward prosecutors who got wrongful convictions—and then ensured that even if those same prosecutors later were found to be lying, that they would escape meaningful punishment. Centralization of political and judicial power has been a main priority for Progressives for more than a century.

Second, by helping to create scores of new agencies staffed by "experts" who then plied their "expertise" in courts and convinced jurors that the charges—however absurd they seemed to be—really were true, the government ensured an increase in the prison population, thus strengthening the Prison-Industrial Complex that exists in this country.

Third, the federal government was able to eviscerate the precious “Rights of the Accused” that Americans supposedly enjoyed, thus further empowering government agents. All of these things have come from the playbooks of Progressive writers and politicians such as Herbert Croly and Woodrow Wilson.

American criminal law, be it at the state or federal level, is a mere shadow of what it used to be. The vast growth of federal crimes and the evisceration of the rules of evidence at all levels have turned what the famed English jurist William Blackstone once termed as a “shield for the innocent” into a system of governmental tyranny.

This is no accident. The tyrannical criminal law regime that grips America is what the Progressives wanted all along. They wanted Americans to have to live in fear of a powerful state that could and should tell them how to live, what to believe, and what to do. And the police state is what we have. ^{*17}

Warlords

The cynical servants of satan had no delusions about the motives and methods of Keynesian economic voodoo. This deceptive model was the fourth foundation corner on their fool the serfs world domination philosophy. The ruling Demonic Warlords belief system is based on Malthus hypothesis, that populations are exponential growth and resource is linear growth, therefore wars, famine and disease are necessary. These Warlords then added the Darwin hypothesis of 'survival of the fittest', and defined fit as wealth, then embraced Nihilism where there was no right and no wrong. With repeated human carnage inevitable, no valid moral system of judging behavior, then those who had STOLEN the most allowed themselves to STEAL even more. The Keynesian 'model' was chosen as the cover story for this ratcheting of resources to the ruling monarch-monopolists. There was never any doubt that trading paper for assets would result in a captive, landless and dependent planet of serfs....after all....it worked perfectly on the Native Americans.

The catastrophe is certain and the elites have preplanned a number of exit strategy vectors. They can create a global crisis and over respond with a nuclear holocaust, unleash their secret bio-weapons stockpile, stage an EMP strike sending us back to the stone age energy level, or they can provoke the race war tensions they have nurtured for centuries. We stand on the dawn of a Thousand Years of Light, when peaceful humans can create an Eden on Earth. But we must cast the money changers from the temple for this to happen. Find and share Truth....it is your duty as an Earthling. ^{*18}

Hijack

Science itself has been hijacked by a 'superiority' complex, and resorting to esoteric mathematical complexity obscures the coercive mentality of 'understanding' only as a subset of manipulation and control. This technologism is not for the 'greater good' excepting to gain initial acceptance. It operates a wolf in sheep's clothing. Technologising Life, weaponising Life, medicalising Life, monetizing Life, and limiting and dividing it in such a way as to operate as a coercive will or power—SEEMINGLY outside or apart from Life. An 'alien will' that seems to come between the Life you are and share and be, to suck upon its life in order to SEEM to exist—AND confuse you with such as life as if it were your OWN—and thus given protection though it cuckolds all that is true.

Science truly is the free discovery of the true, but has been conditioned only to focus with mechanism at mechanism as if nothing is in Mind. But "watch out! He's behind you!" as they shout at pantomimes. ^{*19}

Opt Out

"First by inflation, then by deflation, they will deprive the people of all property until they wake up homeless on the continent their Fathers conquered" ~ T. Jefferson. I continue to be astonished by the perception of Thomas Jefferson: those prophetic words describe perfectly the use our Lords and Masters have made of their money monopoly since 1913. Only twenty years (!!) after they were granted the privilege, the number of homeless exploded - and this was the excuse used, to steal all the gold held by the people and the nation!! Today, Christmastime 2014, the number of homeless children is at a new record while the stock market is at all time highs!! Inflations (bubbles) and Deflations (defaults) are deliberate and intentional: both the creation and the timing of these events are under the control of the hidden hand, just as Jefferson warned. We live under a worldwide "chills and fever" monetary sickness. The swings between these two false realities are becoming ever more frequent, and the defaults (chills) become more extreme with every iteration. The entire world is held hostage to the blowing and puncturing of bubbles, while the hidden hand grow ever more powerful, profiting immensely in rigged markets, since they and only they know the timing of these events in advance. Yes DB, when these facts become public knowledge that will be progress of a sort, thanks for moving the ball in that direction. Since the ability for common action has been effectively removed, the only response left to us citizens is to opt out of the system as individuals and families. That takes more courage and fortitude than most of us have, but to paraphrase B. Franklin: those who trade liberty for safety will loose both. ^{*20}

Monopoly

The initial and crucial step in their ability to control any nation is to form a central bank that is able to create the national currency, afterwards they can simply buy and/or out spend when it comes to their agenda. I like to use a simple analogy to help people understand... how much power it represents.. I ask them if they've ever played monopoly... they always respond 'yes', then I ask/... Do you think anyone playing by the rules could win against player(s) who had complete control of the bank and could create all the money they'd ever need? ^{*21}

Inner Child

The reason why little children (ages 1 through 5) are so happy and playful when you put them outside is because they still have a strong connection to the magic of nature. This connection is what keeps their child-like feature from being suppressed. Because of this, whenever they see birds, butterflies or flowers, they get curious, excited and playful. Unfortunately, modern society does not teach children to embrace this magical wonder of nature; therefore, as children mature, they lose their creativity, imagination and curiosity.

Unlike little children, most adults have a weak connection to their inner-child; therefore, they tend to turn to external things to make them happy, such as drugs, alcohol, sex and material things. When we do not have these necessities or needs, our moods become unstable and we become depressed. This state of depression is not good for our health, because it causes our ego to become overactive. There is nothing wrong with wanting to have nice things. The problem is that we become too obsessed with them and we lose touch with what is real.

The external or material world behaves more like an illusion. To be more accurate, it works similar to a virtual reality. Since the material world is more like an illusion, when we become too obsessed with material things, we start to become delusional and in the long-run, we become more like androids or soulless beings. ^{*22}

Powerlessness

Private agenda coercively and deceitfully asserted and enforced, redefines and redirects the energy and purpose of life to an evaporation via the illusions of power over powerlessness...

Un-owned fear drives private agenda—for one does not WANT to face and feel and know such "powerlessness" or "meaninglessness" of self, and the mind is utilised to script a narrative in which some self-specialness is retained, via victory or victim-hood.

While it WANTS such "unconsciousness" of evaded responsibility, it is not only a sucker for a scam, it drives the market.

The idea of a global imposition of control is the "ego" writ large, driven by corporate amplifications of gross materialism wrapped around the possessive obsession and a fear of defeat and loss of self—which on one level is like a grand chess game determined to be the 'real game' beneath all the illusions of self-vanity—as if power over life exacts some kind of temporary revenge in the denial of un-owned limitations upon one's will.

The template of consciousness that has become dominant currency over the last few thousand years is itself changing, but not as a result of coercive manipulation—but as an expression of a shifting within consciousness to a different foundation than coercive manipulation.

To overlay one's hand is to expose one's lack of substance and lose credibility. But if a false foundation lacks substance then there is no way of maintaining the illusion of legitimate currency apart from seeking to delay the inevitable in the guise of false growth and protection against self-inflicted division.

Working to avoid the inevitable, or waiting for someone else's bubble to burst—is a delay tactic. It is our own consciousness that is unrecognized in its participation in false self definitions, from which true fulfillment can never fruit.

Global communication and relationship, is part of the emerging technology that represents or reflects the transcendence of limits of space and time. But communication and relationship have been largely subverted to the mentality of war, and winning, in a kind of psychological defence mechanism acted out collectively. Defences against communication and relationship are a war on Self or on Life Itself. Only in darkness can they seem to have any meaning whatsoever.

The drive to achieve or maintain control in the illusion of power generates experience of darkness by which to recognize what one is NOT.

This recognition opens a fresh foundation—even if it seems to be in the context of breakdown or chaos.

True currency extends and embodies and reflects value truly shared, communicated and known AS relationship. Fig-leaves take all their apparent value from a mistaken fear of 'nakedness'. The mask is implicitly a cover-up and a complicity of denial. There is, however, more to life than prevailing as a masked agenda, over dis-integrity of word, thought, deed and behaviour. A life that knows and grows its abundance rather than multiplying a sense of lack by seeking to get it from others. *23

Liberals are the most intolerant people in the world. Liberals inevitably demand censorship of ideas that challenge their views, and thus attempt to silence all criticism of their ideology by slandering any opponents as homophobic, racist, reactionary, etc. They attempt to enforce political correctness with no regard to personal freedoms. ^{*24}

Liberals are dupes, what Communists call "useful idiots." I was one for most of my life. "Championing the oppressed" was a pathetic way to justify my life while being blinded to the real enemy. As I will demonstrate, liberals, funded by the Rockefellers and Rothschilds, are mostly unwitting pawns of a Satanic Communist agenda. They are like the lower Blue Degrees of Freemasonry, dupes. This sounds extreme but unfortunately, it is literally true. ^{*25}

I Am a Dreamer

For as long as I can remember,
I've been a dreamer.

Hardly a day passed,
in which I didn't envision,
another world,
a perfect world for myself.

A world of true happiness, without life's stresses.

Enjoying a unique perfect moment everyday,
for every day,
every moment would be perfect.

An idealist's fantasy perhaps,
it nevertheless gave me the hope,
desire and patience,
to wish for this simple dream to be true.

It has always seemed strange to me... the things we admire in men, kindness and generosity, openness, honesty, understanding and feeling, are the concomitants of failure in our system. And those traits we detest, sharpness, greed, acquisitiveness, meanness, egotism and self-interest, are the traits of success. And while men admire the quality of the first they love the produce of the second. ^{*26}

Liberals do not understand what race is, let alone the difference between race, ethnicity, and culture. They apply the word in the same way as people of the ancient world who didn't have any knowledge of science, sociology, or an extensive vocabulary. Ancient Romans called non-Roman peoples "the Greek race" or "the German race" when all the people of Europe are of the same race but different cultures. In the same way the Left declares Jews "racists" against Arabs, as "white people" against "brown people" when both are of the same race—Caucasian, and the same ethnicity—Semitic, but different cultures—Hebrew and Arabic, as well as different religions—Jewish and Islamic. ^{*27}

For the scientist that has lived by his faith in the power of reason, the story ends like a bad dream. He has scaled the mountain of ignorance. He is about to conquer the highest peak. As he pulls himself over the final rock, he is greeted by a band of theologians who have been sitting there for centuries. ^{*28}

Derangement

Mental derangement is the only legitimate place that any discussion over homosexuality and other mentally deranged individuals should be taking place.

In 2003 the same Dr. Spitner of the APA (American Psychological Association) who declared (in the 80s) that there was a gay gene, admitted it was a lie brought about by political pressure. He said they knew before this it was a mental derangement and this is their current position once again. Anyone wanting to know the facts can do the homework and find the sad issue behind how this statement was made.

The media picked up the liberal agenda from there from there and started brainwashing America by making this derangement look "normal" on TV shows etc.

As any propagandist will tell you, if you repeat something enough times, people will accept it as fact (this is known as brainwashing). We now have a generation of people in our society who were brought up with the lie that these deranged mindsets are legitimate and normal. The sad part is the children have been the victims. Children are living in the most impressionable time of their lives. What they hear as they grow (nurture) will become what they see as fact—whether or not the "fact" is actually fiction (such as the LGBT agenda being legitimate and "normal"). Just like a person can grow up feeling no personal freedoms are important and communism is wonderful, they can grow up thinking these mental derangements are normal.

No matter if you are religious or not—these derangements have no part in normality—any more than being a kleptomaniac, pyromaniac, schizophrenic, etc. are normal. But we could raise a generation who thought they were, and acted out the parts if we did the same thing as the liberals in the media did when spreading their lie since the 80s.

Mentally deranged people should not be hated—but they definitely should be helped/cured (facts show this IS a reality)—and they definitely should NOT be allowed to push their perverted agenda on youth anymore than we would allow other mentally deranged people in classrooms (like the above list).

ALL societies in past history who have traveled this same road have fallen/crumbled from within b/c the traditional family unit is proven historically to be the strength of a nation. The LGBT movement is just another liberal way of killing America. And the people agreeing with it are the (brainwashed) puppets of the media who will not do the homework to find the facts. ^{*29}

The sodomy "rights" movement has NOTHING to do with "equality" or "civil rights", the sodomy blitz has two primary goals:

- 1) the destruction of Christianity through court action / lawsuits.
- 2) gaining full "legal" access for homosexuals to groom / molest children.

The sodomy lobby actually believes that if they can just do away with Christianity, they can finally live in the consequence-free utopia they've always dreamed of. ^{*30}

Mirror

If you're in dire straits or a major failure in life there is no one else in this world to blame but yourself. Look yourself in the mirror and look at that ignorant and irresponsible face of yours. Blaming it on other people such and the government will never make any difference. Only you can make the difference in your life. Pick up yourself, dust off and move on. Some people likes to cry over spilled milk. Learn to accept where you stand in life and try to be happy. If you can't do these things, then nothing will ever help you improve your life. Not your neighbor and not the politicians you voted for can help you otherwise. ^{*31}

Monarch-monopolists have been at war with meritocracy, freedom and humanity for eternity. They consolidated control of the money system, first begun with the UK Fractional Reserve System in the 1690s and imposed on the US, with the First and Second US Bank Charters and in final form with the Feral Reserve Act of 1913. They monopolized core industries in America in the late 19th and early 20th century and consolidated media monopoly with the Espionage Act of 1917, see "The Great Influenza" by John M Barry.

If you notice ONE government LIE, then you are a KOOK. If you notice TWO, then you are a TIN FOIL HAT KOOK. Luckily, while LIES about history and current events require massive research and documentation to refute, LIES involving science are easy to prove. Science is the quantitative description of empirical reality and MUST be QUANTITATIVE, REPEATABLE and PREDICTIVE. When faux science cannot meet these conditions, then logical minds can equitably debate the FALSE HYPOTHESIS. My research, website and on-line comments address four of these imposed science frauds, Carbon climate forcing, 'sustainable' energy, 'peak' oil and the big bang. Adding to the "conspiracy theory" is the FACT that all of the false memes have a common motive, proving malice of forethought.

We live in a false paradigm reality and have been systematically LIED to about everything. Support Universal Freedom. ^{*32}

Body

Will your children be taught this? Michael Tsarion—"These fraternities are bloodlines, so they go all along you know back in history. The fact that they walk on the red carpet, only Queens and Kings walk on the red carpet, so how come the American Presidents are doing it? Because they're bloodline, 43 American presidents ALL of the ones that became president are directly linked to British monarchs by blood. Roosevelt, in fact all of them all the ones that became presidents are linked by bloodline to royal families are walking on the red carpet which is the bloodline proves it.

President Bush is directly related through... to the Queen of England.

How about this.... "There are two kinds of law on the earth, one is called Civil Law, which is the law of the land, and one is called Maritime Admiralty, which is called the law of water. The Maritime Admiralty is Banking Law, and the law under banking law says "You, because you came out of your mother's water are a Maritime Admiralty product. This is why the ship is sitting in its' berth and is tied to the dock and its' captain has to get a certificate of manifest to the Port Authorities, because money is changing hands. This is why when you were born you have to have a 'birth' 'certificate' that's got to be signed by the 'dock' because that's where the ship is tied to, to the 'dock'. So the 'dock' signs your 'birth' 'certificate'. WHY? because you came down from out of your mother's water, you came down her 'birth' 'canal', you are a Maritime Admiralty product. Therefore your Birth Certificate is signed by your mother, and where your mother has signed on your birth certificate, get it you will see that does not say parent or mother, it says informant. Your mother was informing the bank that she had just produced another product, to be bought and sold. England, the British Crown through international banking owns your physical body... and that's the law. Bottom line is, you are Maritime Admiralty product and therefore the banks own your body.

On the back of your social securities card will be numbers in red, on the front will be blue or black, the back will be in red. The numbers on the back of the social securities card in red designates your body. It is the serial number of your stock. This why if you were wealthy, you are preferred stock, if you are poor you are common stock, but you are the stock on the stock market. Your body is bought and sold through the use of your Birth Certificate. And if you can get your original birth certificate back you will find that on the back of the birth certificate are all the banks around the world, all over the world the banks have used your birth certificate, because you are a stock Maritime Admiralty banking scheme where you make money for banks.

So consequentially the corporations and government, people who want to control you, they create a 'second' you, and that 'second' you that they control, that they created is ALL CAPITAL LETTERS. Check it out, every time you get a bill get a law suit, you get a fine, a ticket, somebody send you a bill from the water and power, check it out on your driver's license, on your social security card on your insurance card, ANYTHING period, anything having to do with business your name will always be in ALL CAPITAL LETTERS. Because only ALL CAPITAL LETTERS can be dealt with by banks and government. And if you have any other name upper or lower case that applies to you, I got nothing to control over you. You sign a contract that your name is in ALL CAPITAL LETTERS now I can take you to court.

As a matter of fact, the judge sits on the bench, he rules from the bench—the word "Bench" in Latin is a bank... look it up in a Latin dictionary. So the judge rules from the bench, why? because he's ruling from the bank, why? BECAUSE SOMEBODY'S GOTTA PAY, it's just a game here. The Queen of England wants her cut of American blood, wants her piece. Somebody's gotta pay and it goes where? into a bank.

So consequently, if you were in California making money, you are referred to as a "Franchisee", you are a 'franchisee' of a foreign corporation.

1849 constitution of California, 1849 constitution of California says, "No Californian citizen will pay taxes in California State ever. There will never be a state tax in California ever, that's the constitution of California. But if you say that you are United States citizen you are saying you are a privately..., you work for a privately owned corporation called United States, therefore you are a franchisee of a foreign corporation, therefore you must pay the California franchise tax board, NOT California State Tax board, there is no stake in tax in California, you pay the California franchise tax board. Because you are a franchisee of a foreign corporation on the Maritime banking law international law. You work for the queen of England 'your butt is owned' by the Queen of England and a corporation called the United States, while the man called bush is the President of the British Corporation.

You want to talk TREASON? You need to wake up to find out how this stuff really works, because once you understand that you don't need to submit yourself as an American to a British commercial venturer—called courts.

You are an American you don't need to go to court... more@ Jordan Maxwell—The Queen of England and Black Nobility Exposed. ^{*33}
