Business

For most of us, the fights weren't just between Microsoft and IBM. Often they were technical staff versus managers, who repeated the mantra "we are not a computer company, we are a business" so often that within a few years IBM posted the largest loss ever made by a company in a single year since the "business" people produced almost nothing you might want to buy.

The emphasis on cost saving over producing a superior product was scary to watch. Another mantra was "every dollar saved on the cost of a PC is worth millions," quite literally on posters all over the building.^{*1}

Socialism

"An economics professor at a local college made a statement that he had never failed a single student before, but had recently failed an entire class.

That class had insisted that Obama's socialism worked and that no one would be poor and no one would be rich, a great equalizer.

The professor then said, "OK, we will have an experiment in this class on Obama's plan".

All grades will be averaged and everyone will receive the same grade so no one will fail and no one will receive an A.... (substituting grades for dollars—something closer to home and more readily understood by all).

After the first test, the grades were averaged and everyone got a B. The students who studied hard were upset and the students who studied little were happy.

As the second test rolled around, the students who studied little had studied even less and the ones who studied hard decided they wanted a free ride too so they studied little...

The second test average was a D! No one was happy.

When the 3rd test rolled around, the average was an F.

As the tests proceeded, the scores never increased as bickering, blame and name-calling all resulted in hard feelings and no one would study for the benefit of anyone else.

To their great surprise, ALL FAILED and the professor told them that socialism would also ultimately fail because when the reward is great, the effort to succeed is great, but when government takes all the reward away, no one will try or want to succeed. It could not be any simpler than that."

THIS is why the old USSR fell. It was a "cancer" from within eating them up as they tried to keep up with the innovation and entrepreneurship in the free world. Ironically (and most likely intentionally), this lesson is absent from our schools even though "the wall" fell only about 25 years ago.^{*2}

Rotation

... consider the deeper question as to whether we are using the correct reference system.

It is ordinarily assumed that the stationary spatial coordinate system to which we customarily refer the motions of the galaxies is the natural reference system, the one to which physical activity actually conforms. On the basis of previous experience, this appears to be a logical assumption; Indeed, it seems so obvious that the possibility that it might be erroneous has seldom, if ever, been examined. But nature does not always agree with the results of human thinking, and when we are confronted with a difficult problem we always need to explore the possibility that our assumptions with respect to the factors that enter into this problem may be invalid.

The question arises, How can we determine whether nature prefers one reference system over another? The first step toward arriving at an answer to this question is to define the natural reference system. This presents no problem. Once the issue is raised, it is obvious that the natural reference system is that system in which an object that is, in fact motionless, does not move. We may further say that any object which has no independent capability of motion, and is not acted upon by any external force is, in fact, motionless. By definition, such an object must remain stationary in the natural system of reference.

What we need to do, then, is to identify some physical objects of this kind and see how they behave relative to our conventional system of reference. Once class of such objects consists of the photons of light and other electromagnetic radiation. So far as we know, these photons have no capability of independent motion. No mechanism for the propagation of radiation has ever been discovered. Einstein is often credited with having provided an explanation of this phenomenon, but what he actually did was to dismiss the problem as too difficult. In The Evolution of Physics, he discusses the difficulties, and concludes that:

Our only way out seems to be to take for granted the fact that space has the property of transmitting electromagnetic waves, and not to bother too much about the meaning of this statement. ^{*3}

Nowhere

Dream notes # 15: I'm trying to get somewhere (don't know if this is before or after the airport scene). At the airport, I'm there to board Air France TF1 A380 to (?). The airport is strange... as I go to the gate, suddenly find myself in the plane, which is very crowded, with some passengers taking two seats and filling them. Looking for mine, am suddenly in the plane flying just after take off, but flying inside the corridors of the airport, trying to find the exit. Like a submarine navigating an extremely tight tunnel, the plane doesn't have room for maneuver and must fly precisely within the terminal caverns. Suddenly "awaken" to realize it's me that's walking through the terminal, and now wonder if the plane wasn't imagined. Having come to a hall, there appears to be a woman waiting for me (some 'negative authority' type), perhaps guiding me away from the departure and towards a restaurant.

Can only vaguely recall this scene in sufficient detail, however, it's clear that for some reason, in this restaurant, some people are after me, the mob (?). As if owing them something, idk. Or perhaps it's someone else they're looking for, but it appears I'm following them like a bird's eye witness. They're looking for revenge for something, maybe... But stuck trying to get in the restaurant, so they're looking towards the park, and we're now moving into the forest, but can't remember more of this scene.

Continuing, I'm walking the streets by a desolate area, perhaps a thin and empty industrial 'village' on the outskirts of the airport, walking on dirt gravel road, trying to find my way home from the airport perhaps. And seem to have lost something, perhaps the means to get there or home, money (?). Then notice a dingy character or two, the kind that prey on easy targets, who look less fortunate themselves, and a look in their eyes that says they're coming after me. I anticipate them, and turn around to find an alternative direction quickly... Coming across an open intersection on this dirt road, a cab happens to pull up. Another man is haggling with the driver, and being let out as I wait having hailed him. The man is on his way to the airport, but insisting on stopping at home first, I go along.

We get to his home, and he goes in to find money, use the bathroom, or have a drink (?). It takes a long time for him to find what he actually wanted, and before we depart, seems I've wasted my time following him to nowhere. In fact this whole dream could mean: "I'm following others to nowhere."

Free Enterprise

... I would love to see right thinking people all stop using the word "capitalism" in a positive sense. When they do this they are really thinking of free enterprise, which is 180 degrees opposite of monopoly capitalism. You now have to find dictionaries about 100 years old to find the true definition of capitalism, which is, as its name clearly indicates, "the concentration of capital into the hands of a few." Ergo, "Monopoly capitalism" is a redundancy. ALL capitalism amounts to monopoly. That evil is what we have presently as the immediate cause of the economic dilemma in the world in the form of privately created medium of exchange as private debt owed to the few bankers of issue.

Free enterprise, to the contrary, indicates a huge middle class created by locally owned and operated businesses taking care of local needs, wherein most are financially comfortable, few dirt poor, and even fewer filthy rich—with few, if any, gigantic private piles of wealth.

Free enterprise cannot exist with our present capitalistic privately owned medium of exchange. Those who are favored by the bankers of issue will get loans, thus the existence of huge globalist combines, franchises, mall chains, etc. which easily freeze out and destroy local businesses, which find they can never get truly competitive finance.

Capitalism is NOT the opposite of socialism, free enterprise is. None of the other "isms" can exist beyond coffee house rabble rousing without capital financing them. Therefore, socialism—in all its variants—is just another handmaiden of capitalism, as was the Soviet Union and as is Red China, the United States and practically all other "western nations." *⁴

Perhaps the need to move changed, if this early settlement discovered (developed) sustainable farming methods. Crop rotation is not necessary or desirable if multiple, compatible crops are grown year round. No plowing is necessary if you use Masanobu Fukuoka's "...Natural Way of Farming". The soil gets more fertile, not less. It was once thought that the soil had to "rest" and "lay fallow". This worked, but not for the reasons assumed. The ground simply returned to its natural state, growing multiple compatible, enriching plants. These were called "weeds" and considered to be worthless. As if nature's way was not worth studying, and therefore a valuable lesson was ignored. Isn't it amazing how such obvious solutions to problems go unobserved? All the farmer had to do was respect nature and learn from it, but he kept making the same mistakes for millennia. It continues to this day as farmers mono crop, causing unnecessary problems, and respond by applying costly chemical fertilizers, pesticides, and herbicides which slowly destroy the land, and the integrity of the produce. *⁵

Utter Madness

There are basicly two main problems... On the one hand we have run away money printing, consumption of finite resources, resultant environmental degradation, poorly made products we don't even need / shouldn't even still be using in the 21st Century. (All under this demonstrable out of control farce of privatized and utterly unaccountable FINANCE / CORPOTISM / GOVERNMENT... with a near complete disregard for humanity, other life forms, or the ecology of this planet...) And then we also now have this NONSENSICAL PUSH towards supposed SOLUTIONS that don't even ADDRESS the root problems, in a remotely INTELLIGENT way (to FIX the root causations!) and elitist MADMEN who are now using GEO ENGINEERING (that is clearly the PRIMARY CAUSE for most of these IMBALANCES (which is CREATING 1000x more problems, and solving NONE!) who along with their financiers (and whomever is above them?) are literally playing "god" to supposedly combat the problems THEY CREATED... and are now purposefully, EXACERBATING! (ala Hegelian D, in MAJOR....)

This is frankly, utter MADNESS... We need to REPLACE the entire SYSTEM ASAP.. and stop using outdated energy sources, frankenfoods, chemical toxins, central planning, corporate personhood, eco to ecol warfare, fiat currency and these despicable excuses for "governments" (the UN, in particular) that are mere ruses for the NWO / OWG (inc!) agendas we need to DISMANTLE and REPLACE with near / local "citizen based," solutions... Only then, will things begin to improve, after we collectively take RESPONSIBILITY for the MESS we're ALL still participating in... while sheepishly COMPLAINING about the outcomes / focusing on symptoms, vs. focusing on REAL and MANDATORY SOLUTIONS to the myriad of problems, caused by an INSANE and diabolically parasitic adversary we need to DEAL WITH.. before having any option to MOVE FORWARD... and ultimately then MOVE ON (perhaps even in our lifetimes?) if we just GET ON WITH IT, already???"⁶

Living on Edge

Those who seem to be most alive, most in touch with life and their own creative powers, are individuals who are demonstrating what it means to live on the edge of their own potential. They may be musicians, artists, writers, politicians, engineers, scientists, philosophers, or mystics. Living on our edge is really, really important, especially if we don't want to live a life only half-lived—a life lost in mediocrity, ambiguity, and existential confusion. In the way that I see it, the full glory of what it means to be alive only begins to reveal itself when we are actually on that edge. That's when we are truly alive—consciously alive, creatively alive. When we push towards that edge in ourselves, we allow Spirit's true face, the creative force in the universe, which I call the evolutionary impulse, to reveal itself right now through you and through me.⁷

When you were a kid, you might have felt like you were not good enough. You heard it from your parents, from your peers, and from your teachers. You heard it so many times that you started to repeat it to yourself and it shaped into a belief. Your entire adolescence and adult life have been influenced by the false belief that you aren't good enough to be successful at anything. So, here's what often happens when you are presented with a growth opportunity:

- Thought: I'm not good enough.
- Feeling: I feel small and insignificant; I feel unworthy.
- Action: You either take no action or uninspired actions, already convinced that you will fail. You stay in your comfort zone.
- Result: A life of misery, a life of unfulfilled dreams and desires, a life of "quiet desperation" (Thoreau)⁸

Dangerous

Knowledge has no capacity to dispel ignorance. Knowledge is a false phenomenon; it is not wisdom at all, it is just the opposite of wisdom.

Knowledge is borrowed, wisdom is the flowering of your innermost being. You can borrow a plastic flower, but if you want real roses then you will have to grow them in your innermost being. No university can offer it, no scripture can offer it, no scholarship is capable of doing it. They are all impotent efforts, but they have been deceiving millions of people for thousands of years. Yes, they can make you knowledgeable. To be knowledgeable is one thing, and to know is totally different.

A blind man can be knowledgeable about light, but he knows nothing of light, he has not experienced it. He can collect all kinds of information about light, he can argue, philosophize, systematize, he can write great treatises on light, but he has not tasted the joy of light, he has not seen even a single ray of light. He has not seen a rainbow, the colors of the flowers, the wings of a butterfly. He has not seen the green trees, he has not seen the stars, the sun, the moon. He has missed all that. And what he has accumulated is simply rubbish.

It is better to be ignorant and have eyes than to be very knowledgeable about light and be blind.

But the universities exist specifically for that purpose. No society wants you to become wise: it is against the investment of all societies. If people are wise they cannot be exploited. If they are intelligent they cannot be subjugated, they cannot be forced into a mechanical life, to live like robots. They will assert themselves—they will assert their individuality. They will have the fragrance of rebellion around them; they will want to live in freedom.

Freedom comes with wisdom, intrinsically—they are inseparable—and no society wants people to be free. The communist society, the fascist society, the capitalist society, the Hindu, the Mohammedan, the Christian - no society likes people to use their own intelligence because the moment they start using their intelligence they become dangerous, dangerous to the establishment, dangerous to the people who are in power, dangerous to the "haves"; dangerous to all kinds of oppression, exploitation, suppression; dangerous to the churches, dangerous to the states, dangerous to the nations.^{*9}

"When we begin to realize that we're all looking from the point of view of our own reality tunnels we find it is much easier to understand where other people are coming from or the ones who don't have the same reality tunnel as us do not seem ignorant or deliberately perverse or lying or hypnotized by some mad ideology. They just have a different reality tunnel and every reality tunnel might tell us something interesting about our world if we're willing to listen."^{*10}

So let me get this straight, because one single person made a complaint, what she complains about gets "ordered" off the internet? Perhaps if one complains about the complainer because her complaining offends others, who would then "order" her banned from using the internet for making complaints in the first place? This would be such a dangerous precedent if it were actually enforced... Meanwhile, talking with a female corrections officer the other day with almost 30 years in various security roles, even she commented to me on how ridiculously PC the world was becoming. We're losing more than just our ability to speak freely, we're losing our ability to let ourselves "breathe", which comes naturally from being ourselves.^{*11}

Fearless Freedom

The many end of the world scenarios we've had pumped into us from birth, from ducking under our primary school desks in atom bomb drills to apocalyptic religion, books and movies, all have a targeted effect. It's not just about sensationalism and sales with all the media's putting into this. They're playing with very deep human dynamics...

Do they really know something we don't? Or is this just more fear programming to gain a tighter grip on humanity.

Or is it both? Or is there perhaps something much, much deeper underlying these psychotic charades?

The most profound truth beyond all of this illusion is that there essentially is no end, not in the deeper sense where it really matters. Cycles and spirals of change are absolutely "normal" and to be expected and accepted in this 3D reality, while even the underlying more real worlds are also in constant flux, yet they are endless.

Fear of an ending is a lie of the matrix, much like death.

Don't fall for any of it. Fearless freedom is our natural state. *13
