Thousands upon thousands of innocent Americans are being cruelly murdered, year after year, while their government fails to protect them with the full force of the law. The question remains, however: How do we exchange that reality for one in which victims, rather than those who would be their murderers, survive? *¹

US is now less fun than the USSR was, where I grew up! At least back then we had good food and we had time to be with friends and have fun. Lately I have been feeling like I am in some kindergarten or something. Everything is regulated for me, for my safety, I am being told. Even RAW milk is illegal for my f...king safety. I do not really want to be THAT safe. And I do not want the stupid TV shows, the GMO's and the TSA either... *²

... no man has the right to choose his own religion; no man has the right to publish what he feels is the truth; and no man has the right to freedom of conscience. *³

The Fall

Primary fears subvert our personal growth and feelings of happiness. Oftentimes they impede our success because fear is what stops us cold in our tracks when we are venturing into unknown territory. Our choices and actions are directly proportional to the level of control our shadow exerts over us. When the fear that is contained in the shadow side is dominant, we feel unfulfilled and unsatisfied. This prevents us from becoming fully empowered, integrated people. These fears keep us from actualizing our potential and sharing who we really are with the rest of the world.

Since the shadow side is largely unconscious, it affects us without our knowledge. Usually, circumstances that recur in our lives and cause us to say "Why does this keep happening to me?" are sourced in the shadow side. We continue to participate in a particular cycle of behavior, making choices without fully understanding what is going on with us. This is because it is difficult to make changes when we don't know what is truly motivating us. Decisions and actions that are made from a place of fear rarely serve us well.

Our primary fears also cause us to harshly judge ourselves and others. To cope with our fears, the shadow employs a technique known as "projection." Projection occurs when we externalize the feelings of the shadow side and transfer them onto others. Projection is the preferred method of the shadow because we always face in others what we are unable to face in ourselves. When we are unduly critical of others, we are actually just manifesting our own feelings about ourselves. In fact, projection is the cause of much of our interpersonal difficulties. ^{*5}

Bliss is threatening to a culture because it is inherently addicting and contagious. Like atomic reactions, Bliss has a critical mass for groups. Whatever or, more particularly, whoever is perceived as the major source of Bliss activity will tend to be worshipped (often as a guru) or loved. This may result in the formation of a cult that is permissive and whose members behave in ways that appear "irrational" to the rest of the community. ^{*6}

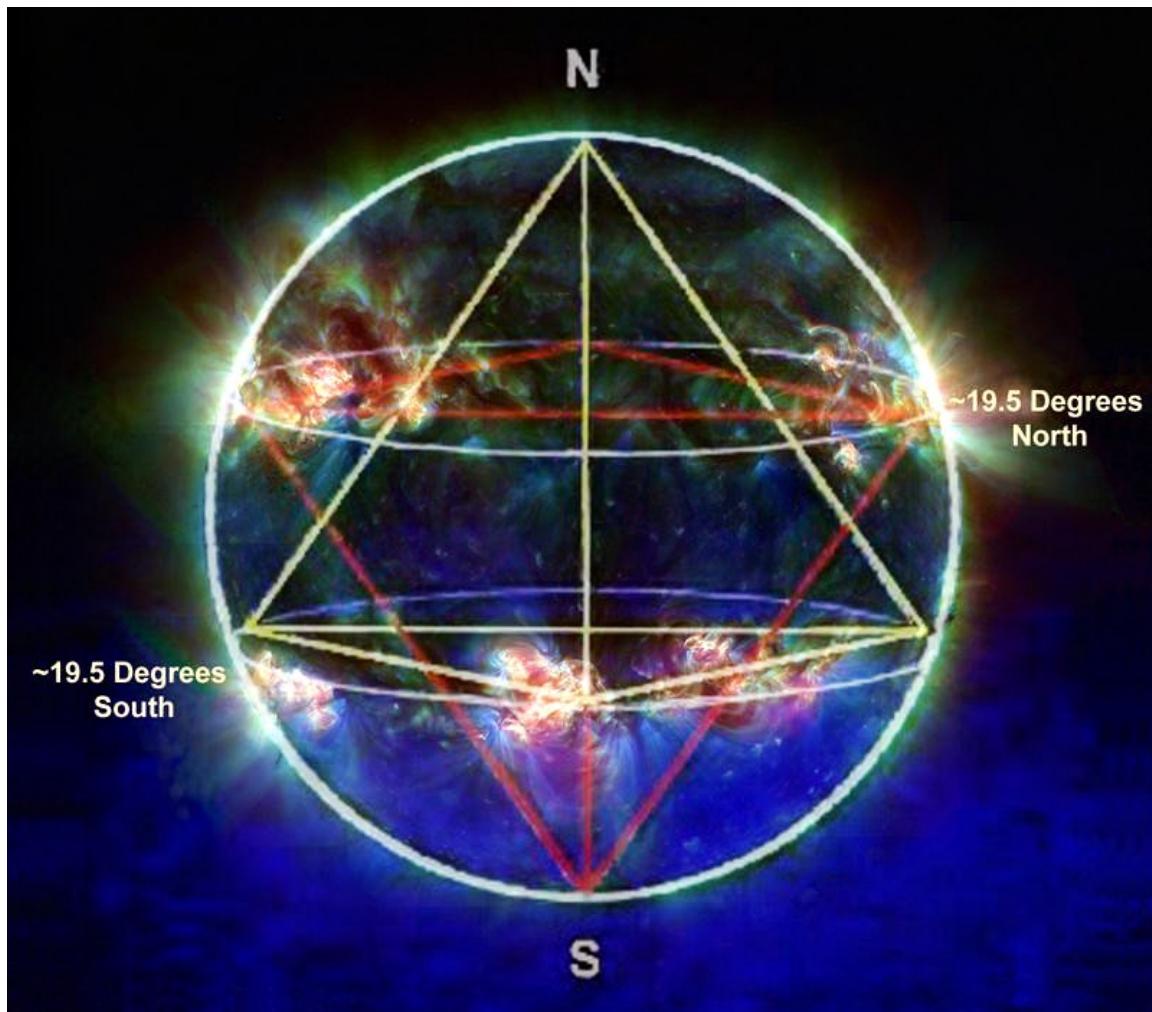

Driving fast, drinking cheap beer and smashing windows isn't rebellion. The best form of rebellion is individualism. Thinking for yourself. ^{*7}

"Where are the men of the West?" Off in their isolated world, asleep, on drugs, booze, wallowing in their own ignorance, hung up on TV watching, mainly professional sports, clinging to the delusions that so far given them a comfortable life. Watch them in the grocery checkout line. Well dressed, incommunicative, booze buyers. No sense of humour, a few items "the little woman" told them to buy, aka mentally, detached whimps. ^{*8}

Good people, when well armed, show criminals how hopelessly outnumbered they are. Good citizens, when well armed, prevent tyrannical governments from rising within their midst. Good patriots, when well armed, teach other nations that a free society works and can't be threatened. A lawless bully hopes for an unarmed victim. Deny him that and he'll seek easier prey, give up his lawlessness, or become extinct. A fool believes that disarming the "law abiding" prevents crime, when it merely enables the criminal who submits to no fool's law. The politician respects or fears an armed constituency because "We The People" limit his power, keeping him under the rule of law, and accountable. The US Constitution gives no rights to the people. It is a document which limits the power of Government and enumerates the inalienable rights that the people already have – endowed so by their Creator. Primarily, the Second Amendment prevents the possibility of any tyrant, foreign or domestic, to oppress this nation again; written with the idea that an empowered populace prevents despotism. Our responsibility: Resist any who seek to relieve us of our rights and duties to this nation by any attempted means; be it by force, false hopes and promises, platitudes of peace, even politically correct and convenient reasoning. If sacrificed or forfeited, rights are seldom regained. Love your neighbor, defend the weak, and hold the line against all forms of tyranny. ^{*9}

Light Bodies

Visual confirmation of this amazing solar "hyperdimensional correlation" can easily be seen in NASA's latest solar observations; this TRACE satellite image (below), taken during a recent "solar maximum," optically confirms the extraordinary, geometric match (above) of the dual latitude, energetic solar activity to our "double-tetrahedron, hyperdimensional model"—encompassing simultaneously both solar hemispheres... At ~19.5 degrees! *¹⁰

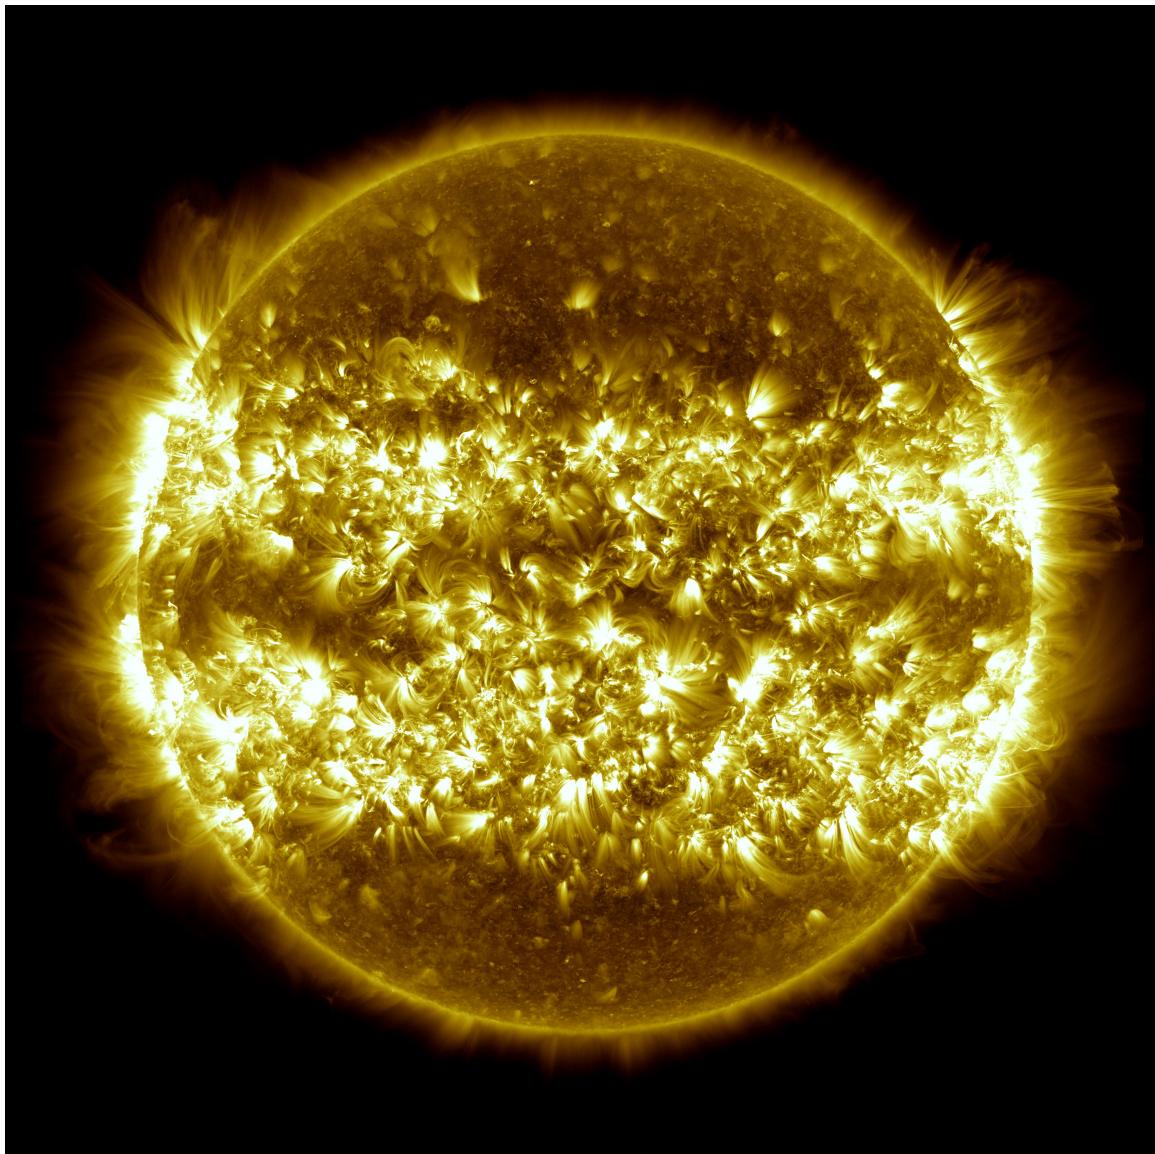

ABOVE: IMAGE BY ENTERPRISE MISSION & NASA REVEALS 19.5° SOLAR ACTIVITY WHERE OPPOSING TETRAHEDRON CORNERS TOUCH. *¹⁰

When a Star Tetrahedron is placed inside a sphere (like Earth), with 2 of its opposite apexes touching the North and South poles, the remaining apex points line up on the planet's surface at 19.5 ° North and South latitude.

Composed of 2 juxtaposed, 4-sided pyramids with triangular bases, a Star Tetrahedron is significant in terms of sacred geometry. It is one of the shapes, through which energetic, inter-dimensional vehicles known as 'Merkaba' or 'light-bodies' manifest. At 19.5° latitude, we experience the intersection between the light body of the planet and its surface. Since light-bodies have the ability to connect us to other dimensions, there exists here an energetic predisposition for inter-dimensional experience.

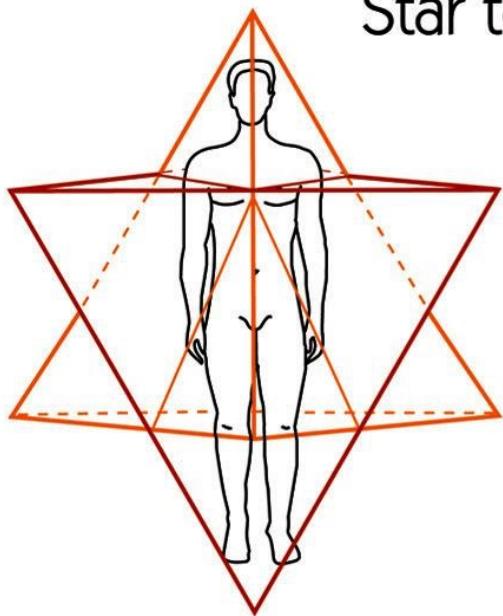

The points at which the Star Tetrahedron touches the planet's surface serve as inter-dimensional 'portals' or 'star gates' for light codes to enter the energy matrix of the sphere. These coordinates serve as a band of key access points for receiving new light codes. In the sacred, dynamic, vortex energy of 19.5 °, self-perceptions are heightened, and manifestation is poignant. Rather than experience what you fear or desire here, you are apt to more clearly experience who and what you "are."

People's personal process in this energy varies. Those who come here to find themselves or to seek direction, generally receive that; others, who come in denial or resistance to their own gifts, tend to co-create a dozen reasons to take exception and/or to feel bothered. Although we cannot predict anyone's experience, we promise to be present for you and to honor without judgment any inner processing that may "come up" for you during your stay with us. *¹¹

In Egyptian, the word Mer means “light”, Ka means “spirit”, and Ba “soul”. In Hebrew, MerKaBa means “vehicle of light” or “chariot of fire”. The Lemurian etymology of the term is also clear. It means “rider of the light”...

Today, more than ever before, we have come to understand our dual nature. On one hand, we see our humanness as the result of a biological evolution, and on the other hand, we view ourselves as the dwelling place of divine light, which is striving to permeate this human body more and more. Enlightenment which does not propel us out of our body, but into our body! ...

A MerKaBa which has been awakened and is filled with radiant life enables us to finally really be at home in ourselves.

The MerKaBa is the heart space of our spiritual energy body. Its activation creates a space inside ourselves which is like our own “temple”. A space which affords the sense of being cloaked in and flooded with light and love. A space in which we find happiness and peace out of which we can align with everything which is dear to our hearts and find clarity in a way which reflects our true nature...

Along with the activation of the MerKaBa, the space of our energy field undergoes the shift into a different dimension of consciousness, a different dynamics and heart connection.

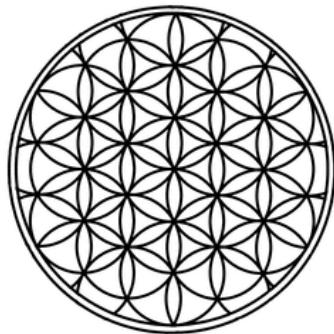

We all require this vastly improved access to the universal field of compassion, of sympathy and goodwill. Everything we do will benefit from it. *13

The Flower of Life

The Flower of Life contains Metatron's Cube and, within it, all five Platonic Solids. The Flower of Life is a geometrical figure composed of evenly-spaced overlapping circles, arranged so that they form a flower-like pattern with a six-fold symmetry like a hexagon. The inner circles are surrounded by two outer circles.

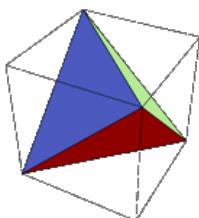

The Temple of Osiris at Abydos, Egypt, contains the oldest example of The Flower of Life found to date.... The Flower of Life pattern contains the basis of Metatron's Cube, and from this pattern all five of the Platonic solids can be derived. The Flower of Life is a 'female' shape—all the lines are curved.

Metatron's Cube

By joining together with straight lines the centres of the flowers in the Flower of Life, the equivalent angular 'male' shape is achieved.

This shape contains all the Platonic Solids, including the two tetrahedrons which form the Star Tetrahedron, and each of these shapes fits inside a sphere with its points touching the inside of the sphere.

Tetrahedron within Cube

The matter in our three-dimensional world is built up in cubic form, but hidden within itself it contains the form of the tetrahedron based on Divine equilibrium.

Matter cannot exist without the Divine content.

What might be the volume of that small pyramidal cross-section, relative to the volume of the entire cube itself? After some lengthy calculations, using trigonometry in three dimensions... the answer is one-sixth.

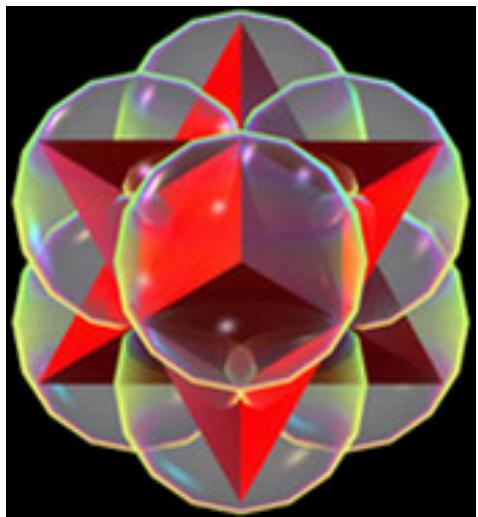

Star Tetrahedron

By cutting off the remaining four corners of the cube (after forming the tetrahedron) we find that the cube contains not one tetrahedron but two, one within the other, each an exact reflection of the other. These two tetrahedrons—the star tetrahedron (also known as the merkaba vehicle of light)—represent the innermost law of the physical world: the inseparable relationship between the two complementary halves—the positive/active/male/electric and negative/pассив/female/magnetic, the manifest and the unmanifest—which form a perfect equilibrium. In creation they rule as two opposite laws: the law of spirit and the law of matter.

Spirit is life: The law of the spirit is radiation, giving, selflessness.

Matter is resistance: The law of matter is drawing inward, cooling off, solidification.^{*15}

The First Cells of Life

After fertilisation occurs in a living being, the fertilised egg divides to form two cells, then the cells divide again, going from two to four in a binary sequence—1, 2, 4, 8, 16, etc. The first four cells form a tetrahedron in a sphere and the apex of this tetrahedron points either to the north pole or the south pole, which probably determines the gender.

Next, the cells divide into eight; they now form one tetrahedron facing up and one tetrahedron facing down; a star tetrahedron in a sphere. This is called the Egg of Life. Every single life on Earth must pass through the Egg of Life stage. Science has recognized that this particular stage of development is different from any other, and it has many unique qualities that don't occur at any other time in its development.

The most important quality of these original eight cells is that they appear to be identical—there appear to be no differences in them at all. Researchers have tried to find differences, but they couldn't. Scientists have found that they can split the egg of life in two at this point, with four cells in one part and four in the other, and two identical people—or rabbits, or dogs, or anything else—would be created. They've gone as far as dividing it once more, making four identical life forms...

The Star Tetrahedron models the energetic body of the human being, the blending of Heaven and Earth, Male and Female, and was known in the esoteric knowledge of Ancient Egypt as the 'Mer-Ka-Ba'. The two tetrahedrons contained within each other represent the two poles of creation in complete equilibrium; spirit and matter. All of creation is based on this divine equilibrium, whether the form concerned is considered to be inanimate matter or a living creature. It is the inner law operating through all forms. Whether a given form is that of a plant, an animal or a human, the body of each of these is subject to the laws of the three-dimensional world. Hidden and invisible within this body, however, is the higher, Divine Self—Life—Eternal Being!

There is only one creature which is able consciously to combine the two laws: man. He is the connecting link between the world of the spirit and that of matter. He is able to live at one and the same time by the laws of both worlds. His thoughts, words and deeds can be an act of giving, radiating selflessness and universal love. On the other hand, his body belongs to the material world and lives by the laws of matter.

Only man is able to manifest his higher Self—that is, God—through his thoughts, words and deeds, when he identifies his consciousness not with his body, but with its spiritual content, with his Self. As long as a person identifies himself only with his body he is like an opaque cube, in that he reveals only the characteristics of matter, crowding the Divine creative principle into a latent, unmanifested state. No-one suspects that the tetrahedron—the Divine Self—is dwelling within.

As the primordial form of matter, the cube, is built up around the Divine tetrahedron, man too, in his inner being, has contact with the Divine Self. That is why he can only find his own Divine being within himself, never by directing his attention towards the outside world.^{*15}

Rh Negative Blood

Interestingly, popular sciences endeavor to attribute Rh-neg blood groups to “mutations.” A solid alternative case may be extended to the conclusion that Rh-neg is NOT a mutation, but possibly the original human blood group. This, however, does not reflect tenured thought, and thus has never been adequately researched.

That there was a group of “pure” humans, not directly related to the evolutionary processes on Earth, is a distinct possibility. This reasoning would suggest that the original humans on our planet were not directly related to the apes, but at some point were “MADE” or “genetically engineered” to give such impression.

Perhaps it was never intended that the Rh-positives become the dominant species. That through some as yet undetermined epoch, the genetically impure group gradually became the controlling species, except for several remote enclaves, initiated a wide-ranging genocidal pogrom, effectively wiping out those who gave birth to them.

All of which begs the questions: What reasons were the sub-species created, what was the process of conquest, what was the duration, and does it continue? *¹⁶

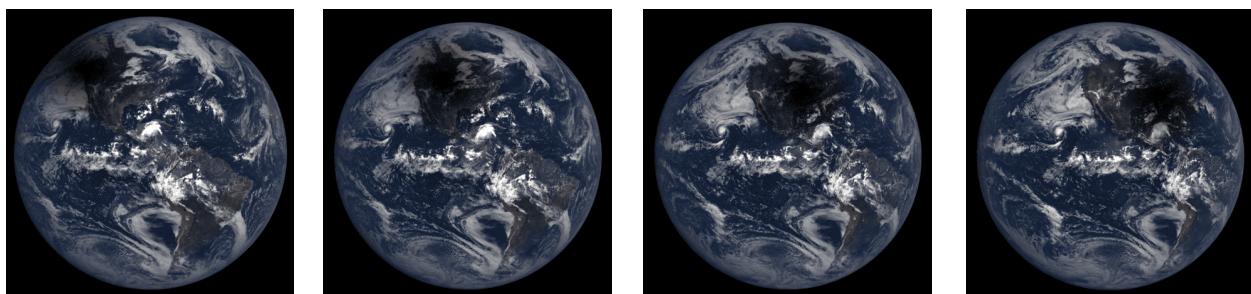

[2017] Solar Eclipse Set Off a Wave in the Upper Atmosphere

The moon’s shadow launched a ripple that was seen from Brazil an hour later

It was the eclipse felt ‘round the world. The August 21, 2017, total solar eclipse that crossed the United States launched a wave in the upper atmosphere that was detected nearly an hour later from Brazil (SN Online: 8/11/17). “The eclipse itself is a local phenomenon, but our study shows that it had effects around the world,” says space scientist Brian Harding of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Harding watched the eclipse from St. Louis. But he and his colleagues activated a probe near São João do Cariri, Brazil, to observe uncharged particles 250 kilometers high in a part of the atmosphere called the thermosphere.

The probe recorded a fast-moving wave in the thermosphere go by half an hour after sunset in São João do Cariri and 55 minutes after the end of the total eclipse, the team reported April 24 in Geophysical Research Letters. The wave is produced by the motion of the moon’s shadow, which cooled the atmosphere below it. That cold spot then acted like a sink, sucking in the warmer air ahead of it and causing a ripple in the atmosphere as the cold spot moved across the globe... This is the first time that scientists have observed a wave in the uncharged part of the atmosphere. *¹⁷

The Corrupt History of NASA Temperature History

Note: See the original link for all newspaper scans and scientific references not included below.

In 1974, the National Center For Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colorado showed no net warming from 1870 to 1970, and a 0.5C cooling from 1940 to 1970.

Climatologists blamed every imaginable form of bad weather on the global cooling that was occurring.

In 1975, the National Academy of Sciences reported the same thing, and said global cooling is inevitable.

In 1989 Tom Karl, the Director of NOAA's National Climatic Data Center, said Earth had cooled from 1921 to 1979.

In 1981, NASA reported about 0.2C warming from 1921 to 1979.

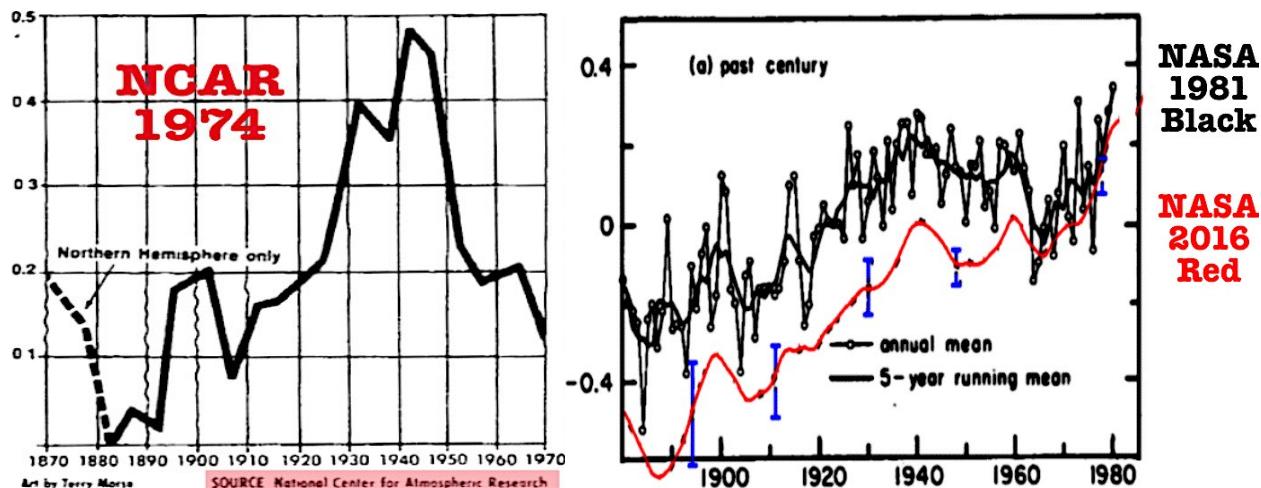

But by 1999, NASA had changed the 1921 to 1979 cooling which Tom Karl reported into almost 0.3C warming, and had erased most of the 1940 to 1970 cooling.

By 2001, NASA had increased the fake 1921 to 1979 warming to more than 0.3C, had further erased the 1940 to 1970 cooling, and showed about 0.5C warming from 1880 to 1999.

NASA now shows 0.5C warming from 1921 to 1979, have completely erased the 1940 to 1970 cooling, and show 1.1C warming from 1880 to 1999. They more than doubled 1880 to 1999 warming since their 2001 graph.

The next image overlays the 2016 NASA graph on top of Hansen's 1981 NASA graph, at the same scale on both axes. It shows how NASA has cooled the past far outside their own blue error bars. This indicates that they do not understand their own data and are not doing science.

Summarizing : NASA has completely erased the post-1940 cooling. They turned Tom Karl's 1921-1979 cooling into 0.5C warming, and have more than doubled 1880 to 1999 warming since their own 2001 temperature graph. Malfeasance like this in most professions would have serious consequences for the perpetrators...

Madness

The "reality" (perception) of the "choosers" is that they sit (and delude themselves) at command / control "centers of power", hierarchical, forcefully imposed constructs of their own rationalizations and delusions, once (in the west) supported by fully informed "consent of the governed", counter-balanced by the "rule of law", which, by a historical sequence of fake "engineered crisis" has, using falsely framed Machiavellian arguments of "necessity", within the context of MSM information control / suppression of real alternatives, made it appear "reasonable" that "consent of the governed" be replaced by "terror of the serfs". This is where we are currently at.

All "sides" (competing power centers), Putin included share the delusion that they are "in control" and, seek to expand their sphere of control and, prevent "loss of control". The "real problem", from their perspective is NOT that they may succumb (lose) control to another power center, it is that the serfs (from whence the power REALLY comes) have adapted to terror and realize it is now (a certainty) more terrifying to comply than to oppose / not support, which at least provides a "fighting chance".

THEY have forgotten the absolute historical truth that without "consent of the governed", nobody can be "ruler". They also forget that despite their fake "experts" assuring us that reality is "as they say" (crowd manipulation, follow the flow, where perceived flow is LIES) that people are in diverse environments, dealing with "reality" every day and, any "one size fits all" decreed reality (philosophy) "cannot compute"... People are pondering the evidence, THINKING and forming rational conclusions. They, assisted by the internet reformation are rapidly concluding that arbitrary rulers are a dangerous impediment to their personal (and collective) survival and pursuit of "life, liberty and happiness".^{*19}

Individual Therapy

... somatic psychotherapy can facilitate the recovery and healing process of medical and mental disorders by:

- Allowing you to ventilate distress about your condition or situation that may block you from effective problem solving and coping...
- Helping you resolve emotional conflicts that you may be expressing through your body and reduce physical complaints.
- Exploring and challenging any beliefs that contribute to pessimism, feelings of helplessness, and passive or negative coping.
- Helping you discern what you can and cannot control, so that you can use your energy more effectively.
- Identifying emotionally "toxic" situations and relationships that trigger stress reactions, and helping you minimize or eliminate them from your life...
- Desensitizing you to traumatic experiences, including invasive or painful medical procedures, or shock trauma, to reduce anxiety, dissociation, and negative coping.
- Recovering developmental deficits.
- Teaching you relaxation techniques that can reduce pain, enhance your medical treatments, and facilitate your recovery process.
- Discovering new meaning in your condition or situation that comforts, encourages, or inspires you.
- Improving your communication skills with your partner, family friends, or care providers so that you can experience more support. Connecting... with information, resources, and others dealing with similar problems.^{*20}

Know Thyself

The great philosopher Socrates once said "Know Thyself", meaning that in order to gain any knowledge or wisdom, one first had to realize that everything they saw was filtered by their individual perspective. This concept is as true today as it was back then. In order to understand your life and its purpose, you must first understand who you are, how you are subconsciously programmed, why you are driven to do the things you do or like the things you like.

But how exactly can you really know yourself? *²¹

Self Knowledge (knowing thyself) means: "A state of non-judgemental attention." *²²

IF you then are risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sits on the right hand of God. Set your mind on things above, not on things on the earth, For you are dead, and your life is hidden with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall you also appear with him in glory.

Mortify therefore your earthly members: immorality, uncleanness, intemperate desires, evil lusts, and covetousness, for these are idolatry; And it is because of these things that the wrath of God comes on the children of disobedience. In the past you also lived among these things, and you were perverted by them.

But now put off from you all these: anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, foul conversation. Do not lie one to another, but put away the old life with all its practices; And put on the new life which is renewed in knowledge after the pattern in which it was originally created: Where there is neither Jew nor Syrian, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Greek nor barbarian, slave nor freeman; but Christ is all and in all men.

Therefore as the elect of God, holy and beloved, put on mercy, kindness, gentleness, humbleness of mind, meekness, patience; Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another; and if any one has a complaint against his fellow man, just as Christ forgave you, so should you also forgive. And with all these things have love, which is the bond of perfection. And let the peace of Christ govern your hearts; for that end, you are called in one body; and be thankful to Christ; And let his word dwell in you abundantly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to God. And whatever you do in word or deed, do it in the name of our LORD Jesus Christ, giving thanks through him to God the Father.

Wives, submit yourselves to your own husbands, as it is appropriate in Christ. Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter toward them. Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto our LORD. Parents, do not provoke your children, that they may not be discouraged. Servants, obey your human masters in all things, not with eyeservice, as men pleasers; but with a sincere heart, in fear of the LORD. And whatever you do, do it with your whole soul, as to our LORD and not unto men; Knowing that from the LORD you shall receive the reward of the inheritance; for you serve the LORD Christ. But the wrongdoer shall be rewarded according to the wrong which he has done: and there is no respect of persons. *²³

"I was having a quite good amount of money, everything was there with me. So I thought 'let me have a change in life.' And find out what is the real truth of living. Money was there... What money can buy, I had bought all the things. Money can buy this camera, money can buy that, this... Everything. But there are certain things which you cannot buy [with] money. With money, you cannot see God. So I thought 'let me see God, keeping aside money'... left my house—not even taking a single rupee (penny)... and came back to Varanasi [spiritual city in India]. And I came up on this side and found its very quiet... Simple. I've been practicing for almost ten years. Not wanting to go back." *²⁴

Transformation and Self Responsibility

You and only you are responsible for your health. If you have a physical problem you must make the final decision to follow a particular curative program. Only with the greatest of care should you make these decisions. To start with, you choose from a vast array of help available to you. Whom do you trust? How long do you follow a cure when you cannot tell whether or not it is working? These questions can only be answered from your deep searching for what is right for you.

If you don't trust a diagnosis, there is nothing wrong with a second or third opinion, or another technique altogether. If you are confused about what has been said to you about your particular ailment, ask the doctor more questions, find some books, learn about what you are involved with. Take charge of your health. Most of all, do not let yourself be limited by a negative prognosis. Rather take it as a message to look deeper into yourself and wider into the available alternative methods. Standard western medicine has many answers, but not all. If it is not efficient in curing a certain disease, then look elsewhere. Cover all bases. You will be surprised about how much there is to learn about yourself and your health. The search will change your life in ways you would never expect. I have met many people whose illness has eventually brought them great joy, a deep understanding and appreciation of life and the fulfillment they were not able to achieve before becoming ill.

If we can only change our attitude toward illness to one of acceptance and understanding that it is a message to be learned from, we would alleviate a great deal of fear that we have about illness, not only on a personal level but perhaps on a national or global scale as well.

...most of all, you need love to maintain your health. Self-love is the greatest healer, and self-love also requires daily practice. ^{*26}

Confused in Love

I used to be scared of people who wanted to like me—especially those I would feel a powerful, emotional attraction to (before learning to discern between physical love and unconditional love).

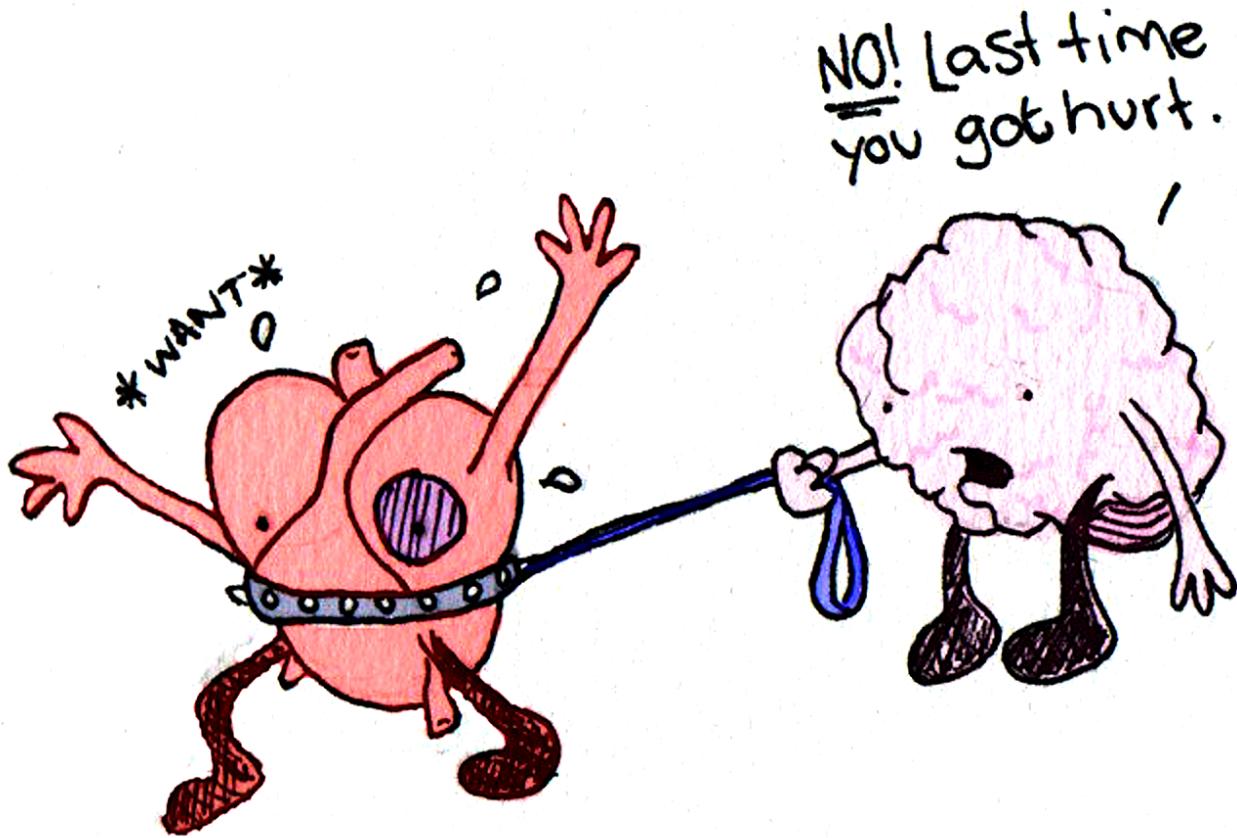

As a young boy who was scared of his father, never learned how to accept loving himself, and receiving love from those whose intentions were honorable. Preferring to prove feigned deceit, by seeking comfort amongst those who were equally self-destructive, hiding from the true light of thine own glory within, and searching the world for whatever it was that was felt to be missing.

When someone would show an interest, in equally desirable attraction, I would end up cowering at the last moment, too afraid of making a move, of taking decisive action to express my intentions... That's what happens—when caused by not knowing one's self.

Afraid of hurting that someone, of being tricked into being manipulated, or losing my own sense of power by giving into another soul, as these experiences I had witnessed, expecting in my own life.

The pain of these—an intense pressure in my chest, wanting to be free in expression—contained by a stronger force of mind, that was desperate to prevent allowing such emotions to be released.

Mind, like a warden in a prison, imposing itself on the cells within its own boundaries of my body.

ABOVE: 'WHAT A HEART WANTS' VS 'WHAT THE MIND WANTS' CLASSIC DEPICTION OF IRRATIONAL LOVE VS REASONABLE CAUTION. *27

For many, many years in Great Britain, a couple could not get married unless they had a place to live. This was an effort to limit the reproduction of persons who would be unable to support themselves and become a burden on society. Since the results of procreation could easily outrun the natural increase in productivity, this made sense. In a general sense, defective persons would find it difficult to pass on their genes. With the unfolding of the industrial revolution, society was more able to support those of marginal productivity. As they reproduced, society ended up with a lot of people who couldn't or didn't carry their share of the burden. Socialism is a mechanism to intercede between low-producing people and Darwinian survival pressures. These people vote so, eventually they bankrupt the system demanding a standard of living that they neither earn nor merit. All democracies go bankrupt.

The situation that we find ourselves in today is rapidly changing. Originally, socialism was a system to protect the weak, those who had no abilities to fill a productive job niche. People who could not compete at a level sufficient to gain a job niche. Our unfolding problem is that automation keeps bumping up the bar for necessary competency. We find unemployable people who do indeed have good competency. Their job niche is gone.

There are plenty of competent people carrying the stigma of misfits who do indeed have skills and a desire to work. There is no easy solution for this. Men base their self-worth on how good a provider they are. Go to the ghetto, the Indian reservations, the Eskimo villages and you will see what happens when everyone is on the dole. Theoretically, our system could support everybody without working if procreation were limited. In the real world, this would rot the soul of most men. They need to strive and produce. If not, they turn to alcohol and drugs. Socialism destroys motivation and the dole destroys men. *28

Only A Southerner Knows...

Only a Southerner knows the difference between a hissie fit and a conniption fit, and that you don't "HAVE" them but "PITCH" them.

Only a Southerner knows how many fish, collard greens, turnip greens, peas, beans, etc., make up "a mess."

Only a Southerner can show or point out to you the general direction of "yonder."

Only a Southerner knows exactly how long "directly" is—as in: "Going to town, be back directly."

Even Southern babies know that "Gimme some sugar" is not a request for the white, granular sweet substance that sits in a pretty little bowl on the middle of the table.

All Southerners know exactly when "by and by" is. They might not use the term, but they know the concept well.

Only a Southerner knows instinctively that the best gesture of solace for a neighbor who's got trouble is a plate of hot fried chicken and a big bowl of cold potato salad. If the neighbor's trouble is a real crisis, they also know to add a large banana puddin'!

Only Southerners grow up knowing the difference between "right near" and "a right far piece." They also know that "just down the road" can be 1 mile or 20.

Only a Southerner, both knows and understands, the difference between a redneck, a good ol' boy, and po' white trash.

No true Southerner would ever assume that the car with the flashing turn signal is actually going to make a turn.

A Southerner knows that "fixin'" can be used as a noun, a verb, or an adverb.

Only Southerners make friends while standing in lines. We don't do "queues," we do "lines"; and when we're "in line," we talk to everybody!

Put 100 Southerners in a room and half of them will discover they're related, even if only by marriage.

Southerners never refer to one person as "ya'll."

Southerners know grits come from corn and how to eat them.

Every Southerner knows tomatoes with eggs, bacon, grits, and coffee are perfectly wonderful; that red eye gravy is also a breakfast food; and that fried green tomatoes are not a breakfast food.

When you hear someone say, "Well, I caught myself lookin'," you know you are in the presence of a genuine Southerner!

Only true Southerners say "sweet tea" and "sweet milk." Sweet tea indicates the need for sugar and lots of it—we do not like our tea unsweetened. "Sweet milk" means you don't want buttermilk.

And a true Southerner knows you don't scream obscenities at little old ladies who drive 30 MPH on the freeway. You just say, "Bless her heart" and go your own way.

Southernness

Someone once noted that a Southerner can get away with the most awful kind of insult just as long as it's prefaced with the words, "Bless her heart" or "Bless his heart." As in: "Bless his heart, if they put his brain on the head of a pin, it'd roll around like a BB on a six lane highway." Or: "Bless her heart, she's so blind, she couldn't see the moon shine."

There are also the sneakier ones: "You know, it's amazing that even though she had that baby 7 months after they were married, bless her heart, it weighed 10 pounds." As long as the heart is sufficiently blessed, the insult can't be all that bad.

I was thinking about this the other day when a friend was telling about her new Northern friend who was upset because her toddler is just beginning to talk and he has a Southern accent. My friend, who is very kind and, bless her heart, cannot do a thing about those thighs of hers, was justifiably miffed about this. After all, this woman had CHOSEN to move to the South a couple of years ago. "Can you believe it?" she said to her friend. "A child of mine is going to be taaaallllkk! in' liiiike thiiiisssss."

Now, don't get me wrong, some of my dearest friends are from the North, bless their hearts. I welcome their perspective, their friendships and their recipes for authentic Northern Italian food. I've even gotten past their endless complaints that you can't find good bread down here. And the heathens, bless their hearts, don't like cornbread!

The ones that really gore my ox are the native Southerners who have begun to act almost embarrassed about their speech. We've already lost too much! I was raised to swanee, not swear, but you hardly ever hear anyone say that anymore, I swanee you don't. And I've caught myself thinking twice before saying something is "right much"; "right close" or "right good" because non-natives think this is right funny indeed.

I have a friend from Bawston who thinks it's hilarious when I say I've got to "carry" my daughter to the doctor or "cut off" the light. She also gets a giggle every time I am "fixing" to do something. And, bless their hearts, they don't know where "over yonder" is, or what, "I reckon" means.

My personal favorite was my aunt saying, "Bless her heart, she can't help being ugly, but she could've stayed home."

To those of you who're still a little embarrassed by your Southernness: take two tent revivals and a dose of sausage gravy and call me in the morning. Bless your heart!

And to those of you who are still having a hard time understanding all this Southern stuff, bless your hearts, I hear they are fixin' to have classes on Southernness as a second language!

And for those that are not from the South but have lived here for a long time, ya'll need a sign to hang on yalls front porch that reads "I aint from the South but I got here as fast as I could." *²⁹

Warmth

The belief that people raised in hot climates were lazy, and generally inferior to inhabitants of cold climates, spread throughout the West. It was deployed to help justify colonial rule in Africa and chattel slavery in America. To be clear, research that finds a correlation between friendliness and balmy temperatures is a far cry from scientific racism. But the possibility of "climate determinism" being used for destructive ends has not gone away. ^{*30}

Hot & Cold Climates

... Jake and I are big supporters of correlation ≠ causation, but generalizations can be a huge help in understanding each other, especially in culture! Lanier's concepts of cultures being divided by climate (hot vs. cold) and context (low vs. high) helped Jake and I understand and adapt to the subtle differences and frustrations we kept running into with the people of southern California, as well as understand weird things about each other, like Jake's love for schedules and timeliness, or my irrational inability to cut across a street before the walk-light changes. We've taken Lanier's generalized concepts about society and applied them to us as people, and seeing how we were different helped us come to compromises! ...

Hot-Climate Culture (Relationship-based)

Hot cultures tend to focus on relationships, focusing on being friendly and comfortable, they often make up societies of traditional, inclusive, and complimentary people who identify together as a group, rather than as individuals. They prefer conformity as a society and will often avoid conflict in favor of a happy, positive atmosphere. Communication is often indirect, tone-intensive (rather than focus on definition), and navigates a maze of meanings, generally focused on retaining relationships. This can make hot-cultured individuals feel easily hurt or offended by the bluntness of direct communication, preferring long, elaborative conversation. Individuals can often seem more extroverted, as emphasis is on the inclusion of the group, items are owned by the group rather than the individual, with a focus on sharing, helping, and being hospitable. In the workplace, team members wait for direction of the leader, who is in charge of making decision and choosing the direction. When someone from a hot-culture speaks up about an opinion, it is often not until they have gathered the social group's perspective as a whole, and they are often speaking on behalf of the group, not as an individual. Timeliness is not very important, as schedules are based around events, rather than the clock. Respect is shown by spending time together to form relationships before the work is done.

According to Lanier, some hot-cultured locations are: Deep South of the USA, much of Asia, South America, Africa, the Middle East, and the Mediterranean. She also mentions that most rural communities or individuals tend to be hot-cultured. (See map below, top left).

Cold-Climate Culture (Task-based)

Essentially the opposite of hot-cultures, cold cultures are focused on efficiency. Often focused on progress, innovation, creativity, and originality, cold-cultured individuals often seem more introverted, as they are more private about feeling and emotion, but more vocal about opinions. Communication is uncomplicated and expected to be direct, meaning-based, with emphasis on the words said, rather than tone used or meaning implied. Individuals will often confront conflict, with a preference for honesty and authenticity over kindness or compliments. Items are often owned by individuals, rather than the group, and labeled as such for convenience and efficiency; when items are borrowed with permission of the owner, they are expected to be returned in the same conditioned. While genuine, cold-cultured individuals often develop relationships slowly and over a longer period of time, with a focus on individual freedoms over the desires of the group. Individuality is valued over conformity and the worker is expected to show initiative and original thought, rather than waiting for the leader to direct them. When speaking about opinion, cold-cultured individuals are encouraged to develop personal opinions, rather than identifying with a group, and when speaking, are expected to only represent themselves, not a group. Time and schedules are important, as they provide efficiency and communication, and cold-cultured individuals arrive on time, or have a reasonable excuse ready if they do not. Respect is shown by prioritizing efficiency and communication, forming relationships during or after the work is completed.

According to Lanier, some cold-cultured places are: Canada, Northern USA, Northern Europe (above Switzerland), European-Jewish Israel, white New Zealand, white Australia, Southern Brazil, white Argentina, and white South Africa. She notes most urban communities (large cities) tend to be cold-cultured. (See map below, top right).

Low-Context (Informal)

Low-context cultures are very laid back. Individuals are adaptive and appreciate change and diversity. They welcome outsiders, or are otherwise unaware of them due to the extreme diversity they are surrounded by. Low-context individuals are extremely flexible and tend to focus on new, modern, and innovative solutions to build comfortable lives. Low-context individuals value what you know and believe hard work leads to success. They are often busy, focused on the future, and prefer casual, low-stress encounters and meetings, often compensating for stressful agendas by minimizing the maintenance of things like the work place, opting for casual dress and first-name basis relationships between subordinates and authority. There is often a low power-distance, allowing for relationships to easily form between people of differing status, background, culture, etc., and minimizing the gender-role expectations between men and women.

A few low-context cultures are found in young countries, like the USA, Israel, and Australia, who haven't been around long enough to solidify tradition and expectation, and have changed drastically over the last century, adapting to new innovations in industry and expectations in civil rights. Most large cities around the world are low-context, simply by default as trade centers focused on diversity. Southern California in the USA is an extreme example of low-context culture, according to Lanier, and Jake's experience wearing jeans and a t-shirt to work, rather than the button-downs of the Midwest. (See map below, bottom left).

High-Context (Formal)

High-context individuals, on the other hand, value structure and rules. Everything has a place and a way of being done. From addressing your elders/superiors, to greetings, to social/gender role in society, things have an order. Because of the emphasis on order and the resistance to change in favor of tradition and honoring the past, high-context cultures usually have a high power-distance, with relationships between authority and inferior being extremely formal. This formality is reflected in many ways, such as the formal attire desired in the workplace, the expectation of admiration of authoritative or influential individuals, the stress on etiquette and manners, and the clearly defined gender-role expectations. High-context individuals often value who you know, priding themselves in their family heritage and building a sedentary home-base. High-context societies tend to value conformity, even while celebrating uniqueness and individual success, gravitating toward people with similarities and harboring a slight suspicion of outsiders.

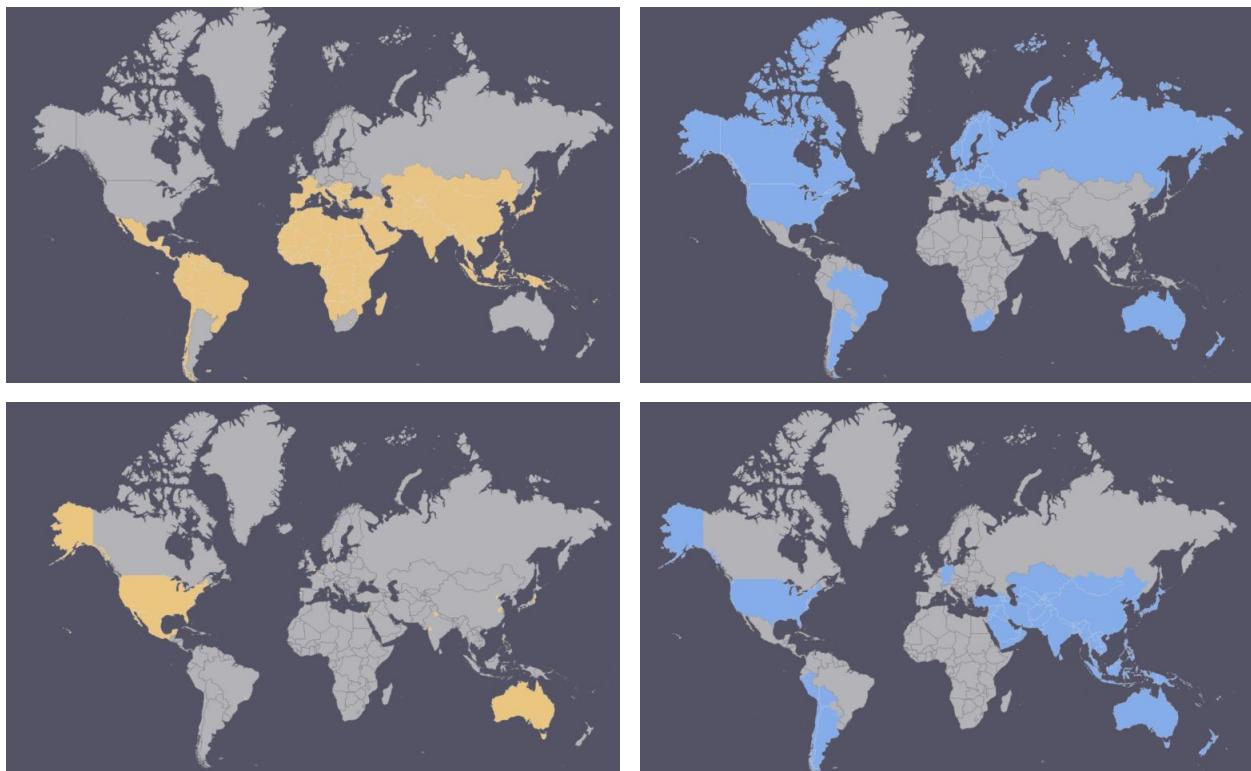

Some examples of high-context cultures are found in older nations, who have been around for a long time, perfecting tradition, and valuing social rules as a necessary way to organize the people, like the native peoples of North America, the Aboriginals of Australia, and the Maori of New Zealand. Others include Switzerland and Germany, as well as Damascus, Syria. These cultures have avoided or rejected global influence for years, opting for their tried and true methods of social organization. The middle east, Bolivia, and much of Asia (especially Korea, with its focus on subordinate-inferior relations, and India, with the caste system and heavy gender roles), as well as suburban USA are all mentioned by Lanier. (See map below, bottom right).

Why is this a thing?

You can probably see why cold-climate cultures are often more high-context; when things are structured with rules, they can be more efficient. But a lot of hot-climate cultures are actually high-context because they have had hundreds and thousands of years to solidify tradition, expectation, and protection against potential outside threats (hence the value of similarity and homogeneous culture). But with the world becoming more and more globalized, younger generations seem to be becoming more low-context, accepting of different and unique, ready to venture out into the world...

Why Is It Important?

... I think it is a survival-necessity difference. In urban areas, being intolerant of diversity would make your life very frustrating, while in rural areas, being unaware of outsiders could put your family in danger without a lot of ways to protect them. Other theories look at adaption of cultures in cold or hot climates, but as Jake and I have been moving around the US and living in such drastically different areas, we've found that this model can suit the individual based on who they are as a person as well as the culture they were raised in...^{*30}

Television

Television (the projection of a vision or message) screens (insertions to reality) are the primary method for controlling people. Remember that it is a projection of a certain perspective of reality meant to exploit our natural, mammalian tendency to model or mimic what we see.^{*31}

Traversing Divine Darkness

[Experienced in 2014] The Solar Eclipse, flanked by Venus on one side and asteroid Pallas on the other, occurs at 9:45 pm GMT on 23rd October in the 1st degree of Scorpio. This eclipse feels paradoxical, for whilst it signifies a powerful drive inward for answers, forcing us to look beneath the sanitised surface of our lives for deeper and more penetrating truths, it does so in such a way that this depth journey can be pleasurable rather than scary, productively creative rather than underminingly confronting. Whatever it is we need to find in the shadows of this eclipse, we can do so without their revelation tearing us apart or disrupting current progress. As such this eclipse comes as a gift, even if its immediate fruits consist of an awakening to darker and more disturbing tendencies within us.^{*32}

Nightmares

A nightmare is a disturbing dream that causes you to wake up feeling anxious and frightened. Nightmares may be a response to real life trauma and situations. These type of nightmares fall under a special category called Post-traumatic Stress Nightmare (PSN). Nightmares may also occur because you have ignored or refused to accept a particular life situation. Research shows that most people who have regular nightmares have a family history of psychiatric problems, are involved in a rocky relationship or have had bad drug experiences. These people may have also contemplated suicide. Nightmares are an indication of a fear that needs to be acknowledged and confronted. It is a way for the subconscious to wake up and take notice. "Pay attention!"

What are Nightmares?

You have had a nightmare or two at various parts in your lives. They are quite normal. But what exactly are nightmares and why do you have them?

Nightmares are a subcategory of dreams. The distinction of a nightmare is its frightening and/or emotional content. You tend to wake up in fear in the midst of a nightmare. Because of its frightening nature, you are more likely to remember your nightmares and the vivid details.

They have a bigger impact upon your waking mind. Its images stay with you throughout the day.

Some studies show that people who are more sensitive, intuitive, creative, or imaginative are more prone to have nightmares. This may be because they are more empathetic and more in tune with their surroundings.

One reason for nightmares may be a way for your unconscious to get your attention about a situation or problem that you have been avoiding. It is time to take notice and confront the issue! Sometimes nightmares serve to warn you about your health or an accident. However, often times nightmares stem from a deeper level indicating that something is troubling you from within your subconscious. Discussing, analyzing, and understanding your nightmares can lead to a solution to some problem, internal conflict or personal difficulty.

Causes of Nightmares

In general, stress, trauma, fears, insecurities, feelings of inadequacy, health problems, marital issues, etc may all be reasons for having nightmares:

Childhood and Family

Present nightmares can be rooted in past neglect and trauma from childhood. From lack of love, neglect, alcoholism, to severe abuse, family members can be the most destructive influence on a person's life. Nightmares may be a sign of such inner turmoil.

Life

The way your life is going and the larger society as a whole can contribute to nightmares. Your perception of the world, health, natural disasters, criticism about politics, finances, crime in the streets and your inability to control such events may sometimes lead to nightmares.

Relationships

Your intimate relationships and your daily interactions with people can also be a source of your nightmares. Marital difficulties or pregnancy are other possible causes. You may be paranoid about how others perceive you or fear that others do not understand and see who you really are. Isolation and unhappiness may appear in nightmares as abandonment and loneliness.

Stress

The way you handle and deal with stress can trigger nightmares. Nightmares are a normal response to unacceptable levels of fear and stress. People diagnosed with Post Traumatic Stress Disorder frequently have nightmares about their traumatic event, like war, rape, death of a loved one, car accident, plane crash, terrorism, etc.

Work

Since most of us spend the majority of our day at work, it is no surprise that work-related issues are a common source for your nightmares. Stress, job security (or lack thereof), change in jobs, co-workers, unresolved work problems, or general dissatisfaction with what you do can manifest into a nightmare. The nightmare may reflect feelings of frustration and an inability to control your work-related issues. People in high-stress level or high-risk jobs often report of having nightmares. Nightmares of this nature may appear as you being attacked, chased, or being out of control.

Having nightmares are normal, but a high frequency of nightmares is a sign of being overwhelmed and excessive stress. These things should be dealt with directly. Nightmares can be an important resource for self-knowledge and emotional discovery. They convey an important message and help clear up the conflict in your life. It is important to distance yourself and work past the emotional content (fear, grief, anger, etc.) of your nightmare and analyze it from an objective perspective. The disturbing emotions may be a way for your unconscious to prevent you from digging deep into the meaning of your nightmares. Sometimes rehearsing or reliving the nightmare while you are awake and then changing the nightmare's content or outcome helps to dismantle the nightmare, breaking it down. It also helps to write your nightmares down in a journal. Although it may be difficult at times, it pays to try and make sense of those darker dreams.^{*33}

Rise of the Archons

Rense: Many people have heard the term “Archon” but would be hard-pressed to define it. What is an Archon?

Weidner: To begin with, I would draw attention to two articles on your site: The Global Coup d'Etat and the one about ownership of the world. The Queen of England owns one sixth of the non-ocean surface of the world; and keep that in mind as we go into the Archon subject. The Archons were whispered about in texts after the burning of the library at Alexandra with some mention of mysterious beings called Archons. But the powers that be spent 1,300 years cleaning up the records and had written out the Archons from our history. In 1947, texts were found in clay jars in Nag Hammadi in Egypt and, on these texts was a story of what the Nag Hammadi people, 2,000 years ago, thought the world was about.

The reason the Nag Hammadi texts, which date back 2,100 years (100 BC), are so important is that no-one has been able to put a spin on it [the texts have not been altered, destroyed or omitted as in the Bible], no-one has been able to distort or destroy them which is what they'd really like to do [to keep the information and knowledge from the masses]. Luckily, they survived, were successfully translated and when many people read them, they found a clear and defined discussion of what these Archons are. The texts had been buried in a deep cave in Egypt, in order to protect the most important information that they had.

Rense: There are 13 codices containing over 50 texts, which is quite a substantial amount of writing.

Weidner: A highly descriptive document of an entirely different world [from the one we know]. People don't realise that, 2,000 years ago, there was a religion on this planet called Gnosticism, which was the biggest religion on earth at the time, was vying with Hinduism. You could go take a university course on the history of religions now and wouldn't even find a mention of Gnosticism. The Nag Hammadi texts provide a description for what the Gnostics believed. Gnostic is a Greek word meaning knowledge – gnosis. The Gnostics believe that liberation can only be achieved by knowledge, by the consumption and evaluation of reality through knowledge. The library at Alexandria was run by Gnostics and they were the first people to collect scrolls and books and assemble this information. Their culture spread throughout Europe and the Middle East. This was long before the advent of the Western religions outside of Judaism which was mostly concentrated in Israel. Gnostics preached that there was an invasion that occurred about 3,600 BC and, about 1,600 years before the Nag Hammadi texts were buried, they wrote that this invasion was like a virus and, in fact, they were hard pressed to describe it. The beings that were invading were called Archons. These Archons had the ability to duplicate reality, to fool us. They were jealous of us because we have an essence of some kind, a soul, that they don't possess, and the Nag Hammadi texts describe the Archons. One looks like a reptile and the other looks like an unformed baby or a foetus. It is partially living and partially non-living and has grey skin and dark, unmoving eyes. The Archons are duplicating reality so that when we buy into it, when we come to believe that the duplicated, false state reality is the real reality – then they become the victors.

Rense: How are they duplicating reality? Is it by using consciousness?

Weidner: Yes, according to the texts, they can get into people and can manipulate people to do things very suddenly that are very odd. But also they are actually responsible for the deterioration of culture, so unlike the culture of the ancient Greeks or Chinese but a cheap façade of a culture. As the Archonic presence has spread across the earth and has escalated in the 20th century, you can see that they are responsible for sprawl and the mass ugliness that is everywhere.

Television is an example of Archonic imitation.

Humans are imitated on television but the imitation is altered and is nearly always obscene and profane because the Archons not only do not understand the sacred but they hate it. They are jealous of the natural world and of human beings with the natural world. Also of sexual relationships: loving couples make them angry and they love violence and are sexually titillated by anger and war and death. They create war to consume energy from the dying.

Rense: The Archons seem to be making their big move now, at this time. You can find out about the Nag Hammadi Library on the Internet, which is the living record of the great Gnostic movement. Gnostics and Templars seem to have been all but cleansed from history. How, in the texts, have the Archons been described as coming here? Is there any reference to their mode of transit, travel?

Weidner: Supposedly, they live or lurk outside the inner planets near Saturn i.e. in our solar system. The Gnostics thought that Jehovah was an alien, off planet, demon and that he was a fake god – a masquerading Archon again – duplicating reality. They did believe in God, they believed in what they called the one true God and that's how they always defined it. Interestingly, Jesus defined his belief as being of the one true God, always delineating it. I believe many of the stories of Jesus are actually Gnostic myths about a possible rebellion against the Archons who came down very severely on the rebel.

So the Archons were released somehow from a prison – and this is probably what The Book of Enoch is about – where he said he took the demons and locked them in a box but that they would come back at the end of time. Jesus was very interested in relating this idea that something was going to happen at the end of time. So you see this illusion going on and then we see also that when Sitchin translated the texts, the cuneiform tablets, that the Annunaki are probably also the Archons. So we can learn more about the Archons by reading about the Annunaki who came here and altered us genetically [using our DNA] so that they could make slaves of us. So we can work out a picture of what these Archonic forces are. They were somehow successfully quelled and then began their re-emergence and they are as close to immortal as we could understand and that's why their plan is so precise but they needed time to gain power because, the people of the earth were essentially Gnostics who were resistant to, and didn't believe in the "religion" that was being foisted on them where they must be fearful of an angry, war god called Jehovah. But eventually, the forces of Jehovah conquered the last of them and now they are pretty much in control of the system and are getting ready for the final, gleeful [sarcastic] orgy of despair and horror [imposed upon humans] which is what they like. So, following Tim Rifat and his horrific description of what is about to happen. This is very appropriate, very accurate because this is exactly what they want to occur.

When I did a show for the History Channel last year, I shot it so that it would not end up making people fearful. I shot it so that it didn't have any fearful footage and they went behind my back and they shot more footage without my knowing and they filled this special, for which I was one of the producers, resulting in two hours of terrorising fear. This is the head of a major network. I think the Archons are involved in some bizarre pornography where they are here and they are perverting us and enjoying every last second of it and we're letting it happen and I don't know if there's any escape from it because now they've made it almost desirable to be violent and perverted and sick.

Rense: Ask any young person what their life is like and you will hear much of what Jay Weidner is describing. There was a news story, the average 14-year old watches an average of one and half hours of hard core porn per week. There are current terms that we use which could be ascribed to Archon activity: Zionists, megalomaniacs, but this evil that we're talking about certainly has been around for a long, long time. ^{*34}

Ruler

I was raised by a real Ukrainian, my mother June. This is how her people responded to a despotic Turkish sultan they had just defeated, and who still wished to rule them. I took this from a wikipedia entry by the way :) To whit:

Zaporozhian Cossacks to the Turkish Sultan!

O sultan, Turkish devil and damned devil's kith and kin, secretary to Lucifer himself. What the devil kind of knight are you, that can't slay a hedgehog with your naked arse? The devil excretes, and your army eats.

You will not, you son of a bitch, make subjects of Christian sons; we've no fear of your army, by land and by sea we will battle with thee, fuck your mother.

You Babylonian scullion, Macedonian wheelwright, brewer of Jerusalem, goat-fucker of Alexandria, swineherd of Greater and Lesser Egypt, Armenian pig, Podolian thief, catamite of Tartary, hangman of Kamyanets, and fool of all the world and underworld, an idiot before God, grandson of the Serpent, and the crick in our dick.

Pig's snout, mare's arse, slaughterhouse cur, unchristened brow, screw your own mother!

So the Zaporozhians declare, you lowlife. You won't even be herding Christian pigs. Now we'll conclude, for we don't know the date and don't own a calendar; the moon's in the sky, the year with the Lord, the day's the same over here as it is over there;

for this kiss our arse! —Koshovyi Otaman Ivan Sirko, with the whole Zaporozhian Host. ^{*35}

"To be a socialist is to submit the 'I' to the thou; socialism is sacrificing the individual to the whole."

"We need to stop worrying about the rights of the individual and start worrying about what is best for society."

—Hillary Clinton

If you met them in person, you would probably instantly like any of these intelligent, verbal, likeable, even charismatic people. This is their greatest cover, since we often expect great evil to 'appear' evil, led by media portrayals of evil as causing changes in the face and demeanor of people, or marking them like the biblical Cain. ^{*36}

Natural Rights

People are born with natural rights which include Life, Liberty, and Property (the "Big Three"). "Life" is the 5 senses and with "Liberty" (freedom) we go about our day using our 5 senses to create value (converting resources into "property"). All humans are born with natural rights including the "Big Three" Natural rights and no human's natural rights trump another human's natural rights. In an honorable system, we humans go about our day freely using our senses to convert resources into property in the pursuit of happiness.

Sounds nice but here is the problem : We humans are also born with the instinct to avoid pain and creating value requires work and work is pain. Some people minimize pain by trying to be more efficient and creating labor saving tools, etc. However, some people avoid pain by abusing the natural rights of others and taking their property (stealing). Thus, when stealing is less painful than work, the unenlightened humans steal.

So when does stealing stop?

When stealing becomes more painful than work.

Hence, governments and the associated legal systems were created to make stealing and abuse more painful than work and peace. Basically, the purpose of government is to protect the natural rights of We The People. Consequently, it seems obvious that human natural rights do not exist because governments granted them to humans . . . indeed . . . the opposite is true . . . Governments came into existence because natural rights already existed and humans needed a way of protecting same.

Such is an important point to remember as many types of governments were tried throughout history but those in power frequently used such power to abuse the natural rights of its people instead of protecting them. These governments created "Law" and law is force (at the point of a gun). Such laws created a system of legal stealing where those in power would make it legal to "steal" the property of those governed. And such government made a person's lawful defense of their natural rights and property illegal. As a result, such governments became the evil it was created to defend against.

So, how does one create a government that will not abuse the natural rights of its citizens? Restated, what good is a government that protects its citizens so that only the government can abuse them? Or, how do we make it more painful for government goons to abuse their power than to not abuse their power?

Hard questions. The US Constitution was a very good effort in achieving such goal and we the people are very lucky a man as enlightened as Madison was around to help draft our Constitution. Due in large part to the efforts of Madison, we started out as a Constitutional Republic founded on the concept of natural rights. The concept that no law, no matter how clever those in power word it, can morally violate the natural rights of the people. Yes, the government would have the POWER to violate the natural rights of the people but such acts would not be moral or supported by the original scope of power granted to the government by the people.

A good example is slavery. At one time our government and associated legal system allowed slavery - the abuse of the natural right to liberty and property. How? Well, such happened because the abuse of power was not painful enough and those in power were not enlightened enough to behave better on their own. Further, the 9 lawyers in black robes (Supreme Court) turned a blind eye to such abuse minimizing the pain of same - and it would take the death of 600,000 to create pain necessary to stop the abuse.

Today we are no longer a Constitutional republic. Our government abuses our natural rights on a daily basis and laughs in our faces while doing same. It takes the property of person-X and gives same to person-Y which is a clear violation of a human's natural right to property. Our government has taken the power to FORCE us to enter into legal contracts for insurance - a violation of our natural right to freedom. Our government is in the process of taking our right to own reasonable tools of self defense (e.g. guns) in clear violation of the natural right to life. For what is the right to life if not having the power to protect same? And the 9 lawyers in black robes are not only turning a blind eye to such abuse, they are engaging in judicial activism to support such abuse of power.

How do we make the government abuse stop? There is only one way - we the people have to decide enough is enough and take action to make such government abuse more painful than honoring the natural rights of we the people. Unfortunately, the last time we the people did such it cost the lives of 600,000. ^{*37}

For the last century, we have been getting the Big Brother government we deserve, with all its many alphabetic agencies—the kind of central government many people seem to want. ^{*38}

Well-Fare

For a guy and his girlfriend with two kids.

Follow these proven steps:

1. Don't get married to her.
2. Always use your mom's address to get mail.
3. The guy buys a house.
4. Guy rents out house to his girlfriend who has 2 of his kids.
5. Section 8 will pay $900 a month for a 3 bedroom home.
6. Girlfriend signs up for Obamacare so guy doesn't have to pay for family insurance.
7. Girlfriend gets to go to college for free being a single mother
8. Girlfriend gets $600 a month for food stamps
9. Girlfriend gets free cell phone
10. Girlfriend gets free utilities.
11. Guy moves into home but continues to use mom's house to get mail sent to.
12. Girlfriend claims one kid and guy claims one kid on taxes. Now you both get to claim head of household at $1800 credit.
13. Girlfriend gets disability for being "crazy" or having a "bad back" at $1800 a month and never has to work again.

This plan is perfectly legal and is being executed now by millions of people.

A married couple with a stay at home mom yields $0 dollars.

An unmarried couple with stay at home mom nets (gets for any that apply):

- $21,600 disability +
- $10,800 free housing +
- $6,000 free obamacare +
- $6,000 free food +
- $4,800 free utilities +

PIST-AWF

I have been somewhat under the weather since my doctors informed me that I have an acute case of Post Islamic Stress Trauma with Apologetic Whitehouse Fatigue (PIST-AWF).

For those of you who do not know what that is, PIST-AWF is a newly defined disease that is found to be widespread and highly contagious.

Symptoms include, but may not be limited to:

- Severe pain of the scalp from pulling your own hair while viewing the President pander to Muslim terrorists.
- Loose bowels from swallowing the fact that liberals elected Obama twice.
- Extreme hunger due to vomiting from nightly seeing terrorists murdering innocent people.

If you feel you have Post Islamic Stress Trauma with Apologetic Whitehouse Fatigue, please notify your local election board and place your name on the list for a cure. It is expected, and sincerely hoped, that the cure will be available in November of 2016.

And I stupidly thought it was due to aging! *⁴¹

F.Y.!

They were all behind her...

- Hollywood celebrities shilled for her.
- The entire media shilled for her.
- Mega banks supported her.
- The polls were always in her favor.
- All of the living presidents supported her.
- The mega corporations supported her.
- The internet companies supported her.
- She had dozens of people murdered.
- The FBI and the DoJ conspired to help her.
- The DNC rigged the primaries for her.

AND SHE STILL LOST!

Is this the greatest fuck you in the history of everything? *⁴²
